FLEES TO DETROIT

Parents Decide Upon Arrest and Ter in Prison as Last Resort.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of a young Londoner who recently burglarized his father's home taking several hundred dollars' worth of diamonds and watches, and making his escape to Detroit. There, under the influence of cocaine, of which he is the unfortunate victim, the young man fell into the hands of other cocaine fiends, and sold one of diamond rings for $2. The young man is the son of most respectable parents, who have taken every measure in human power to bring about the boy's reformation. Some years ago a newspaperman mearthed the appalling condition that scores of young men in London were victims of the cocaine habit, and that ts influence was completely demoralizing. Many of them were sleeping They were committing

A crusade was conducted and sentiment throughout Canada was aroused to such an extent that the most stringent legislation was passed bring about a reform. The sale in this city was a solutely checked, and the habit was largely wiped out, save in the cases of ten or twelve young men who had become abject slaves of the drug before the practice was discovered.

The young man, who is to be ar-rested in Detroit, is one of the survivors of this group of young men, all of whom were boys with more than ordinary advantages and repectable Some of them have died, others have met tragic deaths, while the few left are hopeless wrecks, mentally, physically and morally.

Cocaino Makes Thieves.

The cocaine fiend is always a thief. He will steal at any time to satisfy his craving. Many of them reform temporarily, but they usually fall from positions of trust eventually, causing many a domestic tangle and striking at the home organization. Such has been the deplorable experience of the young man now sought at Detroit. Before he became addicted to the drug he was all that a father or mother could desire in a son, but since he has been a heavy and escapade, for which he is held only indirectly responsible, came as the climax to many chapters of temporary reformation.

He had been recently brought to his home after having undergone treatment for the cure of the habit, and had been trusted by his parents. few days ago he disappeared after having stolen a diamond studded watch, two other watches, and a number of rings. He fled to Detroit, and disposed of the valuable jewelry for a pittance in order to secure cocaine.

Arrest Will Be Made. He was seen in Detroit exhibiting a box of cocaine, and as his haunts are known there will be no difficulty in bringing him back and having him sent to prison for a long term, as his father desires.

"Are these young men able to obtain the drug in London?" his father was asked. "No," he replied "But they can ecure it in St. Thomas or Detroit."
