THE HOLLOW OF HER HAND

By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

She glanced at his face, furtively at first, as if uncertain of his mood, then with a prolonged stare that was frankly curious and amused.

"Don't lose your head, Leslie," she said softly, almost puringly.
He started. "Oh, I say, Sara, I'm not likely to—"

"Stranger things have happened," she interrupted, with a shake of her head. "I can't afford to let you make love to her and getting tired of the game, as you always do, dear boy. Just as soon as you find she's in love with you. She is too dear to be hurt in that way. She mustn't—"

"Good Lord!" he cried, "what a boundary you must make me for! Why, if I thought she'd— But nonsense! Let's talk about something else. Yourself, for instance."

She leaned back with a smile on her lips, but not in her eyes, and drew a long, deep breath. "He was hard hit. That was what she wanted to know."

They found Booth at the inn. He was sitting on the old-fashioned porch, surrounded by bags and boys. As he climbed into the car after the bags, he looked grinned and the coins in his pockets and ventured, almost in unison, the intelligence that he had a letter from there if he ever came back again. Big and little, they had transported his ease and canvases from place to place for three weeks or more, and his departure was to be regarded as a financial calamity.

"I could go to the village and see if that man of 'em was to come to town," said one small citizen as Croesus rode away in a cloud of dust. "I wish to "See, I wish to goodness he'd come back." Was the soulful cry of another.

"I don't like them pictures he paints, though, do you know, another, more critical than avocative."

"Naw!" was the scornful reply, also in unison.

From which it may be gathered that Mr.
Brandon Booth was not for religion, for art's sake alone, but for its relation to Mammon.

The object of their comments was making himself agreeable to the lady who was to be his hostess for the next few days. Leslie, perhaps in the desire to be alone with his hostess, and to be with the chauffeur, and paid little or no heed to that unhappy person's comments on the vile condition of the village.

"By the way, Sara," he said, suddenly breaking in on the conversation that went on at his back, and thereby betraying a secret wish that was taking shape in his mind, "what have you done with the little red runaway you had a year or two ago?"

She started. "You mean—" "I would come in very handy for all those tours," "I disposed of it some time ago, Leslie," said she. "I thought you'd remember."

"Clear—by Jove!" he stammered in confusion.

He remembered that she had given it away a day or two after that awful night in March, and he recalled her reason for doing so. He twisted the tiny end of his moustache with unnecessary vigor. "I might say fur!" It was a most unhappy faux pas.

"Softening of the brain," he muttered, in dismal apology to himself.

"And you painted those wretched little boys instead of the beautiful things that nature provides for us out here, Mr.
Booth?" Sara was saying to the artist be-

THE WAY OUT.

From Weakness to Power by Food
Route

Getting the right start for the day's work often means the difference between doing things in wholesome comfort, or dragging along half dead all day.

There's more in the use of proper food than many people ever dream of—more the pity.

"Three years ago I began working in a good general store," writes a man, "and between frequent deliveries and more frequent customers, I was kept on my feet from morning till night."

"Indigestion and trouble followed me for some time, and in fact my slight breakfast was taken more from habit than appetite. At first this insufficient diet was not noticed much, but at work it made me weak and hungry long before noon."

"Yet a breakfast of rolls, fried foods and coffee meant headache, nausea and kindred discomforts. Either way I was losing weight and strength when one day a friend suggested that I try "Grape-Nuts" breakfast."

"So I began with some stewed fruit, Grape-Nuts and cream, a soft boiled egg, toast and a cup of Postum. By noon I was hungry but with a healthy normal appetite. The weak, languid feeling was not there."

"My head was clearer, nerves steadier than for months. Today my stomach is strong, my appetite normal, my body power splendid and head always clear."
