THE GREAT STRUGGLE

idle. They have a central organization and they are forming local centres all over the province. They have not yet settled on a definite program, but they are determined to fight. They claim that the bulk of the press, the clergy, and the churches is on their side, and that they are sure to win. One prominent temperance worker said last night that this question had to be fought out once for all and it might better be done now than later on. The whisky business must go. They were going to organize the churches into great committees for working and canyassgoing to organize the churches into great conmittees for working and canvassing. They would employ good legal talent and see that every step was lawful. They were going to watch their opponents closely. To carry on the war against whisky they would need money, but their organization was such that he had no fear of their ability to raise

The opponents of the Scott act have picked up the gauntlet thus thrown down to them in some twenty-one counties, and are vigorously organizing for the fray. The central bureau in Toronto will lend them all possible assistance in the way of furnishing campaign literature and practiced platform speakers, and the fight will thus be a bitter one. E. King Dodds, T. J. Bell (Dundas Standard) and James Fahey have already buckled on their armor in the interest of the liquor party, and other well-known platform speakers are expected to soon join them. In Simcoe and Stormont the anti-Scott preparations are already far advanced, and the other counties are being put in shape as rapidly as possible.

The campaign promises to be the most extensive and exciting one of the kind ever witnessed in Canada, as both sides are determined to strain every nerve to

The Opera Festival, Saturday Might. The artists of the Lablache opera company rendered a program upon the second night of their festival which surpassed in artistic merit anything the audience were led to expect. The concert part was a procession of musical gems which held the audience enwrapt from beginning to end. Each of the artists surpassed any previous effort of the artists surpassed any previous effort they had before made in the city, and round after round of applause testified to the thorough pleasure they afforded their listeners. Many expressions in effect that it was the best concert ever given in the city were overheard as the people left the building. Signor Stagi's singing of Ah siben Mio, Signor Del Puente's Toreador song, and Mile. Louise Lablache's Mignon and Carmen selections were gems beyond criticism, while Gounod's Ave Maria sung by Madame Lablache, with a violin obligate by Signor Stagi, was a noble renderby Madame Lablache, with a violin obligate by Signor Stagi, was a noble rendering of a glorious composition. A special word of praise is due the tenor, Signor Stagi, for the masterly manner in which he played the obligato, proving himself a violinist of great excellence in addition to his vocal abilities, indeed had he not such a beautiful voice he might some day be a celebrated violin virtuoso. Signor Del Puente's singing of Di Provenza and the encore, Tarantelle by Rossini, require more praise than we have space to give; he is certainly a grand artist. The company have tendered Mr. Thompson a complimentary benefit, to take place to-night, and though the notice is short we expect this young gentleman will be greeted with a crowded house.

chin were sadly in need of a razor, while numerous gray hairs in his mustache and over the area of his scalp, indicated an age of 40 years or theresbouts. He has dark eyes with hair dark brown and a mustache a reddish brown. His forehead is high but rather narrow, and his neck is short, thick and red. Each time he opened his mouth he revealed two or three decayed and badlooking teeth on his lower jaw, right side, while, as though determined to himself provide every possible evidence of the falseness of his claims, he persisted in obtruding into public notice a pair of large, coarse-grained hands with neglected finger nails, and a pair of feet and calves, very large, encased in the historical and poorly-cared for top boots.

THE ONTARIO AND QUEBEC.

Arrival of the First Passenger Train in this City.

The official car of the Canadian Pacific ailway arrived at the Yonge street cross ng of the Ontario and Quebec railway at 6 o'clock last evening. The car contained W. C. Yan Horne, general manager of the Canadian Pacific; R. B. Angus, vice-president; W. Whyte, general manager of the Ontario and Quebec division; Thos. Tait, ontario and Quebec division; Thos. Tait, Mr. VanHorne's private secretary and others. The car left Montreal at 5.45 Saturday night and Smith's Falls at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. The road from the Falls to Toronto was found in excellent, order, and the officials were pleased with the trip. Carriages were waiting at Yonge street crossing and the party was driven to the Rossin house, where they registered. After dinner the officials repaired to the new offices of the company in the old U.E. club buildings. The despatcher's room on the top floor was the centre of an animated scene after the magnates entered and messages and orders were flashed in a hundred directions.
