Lower Granville

Mrs. C. S. Bird and child came from Lynn on Friday and are with her mother, Mrs. R. P. Wade.

The community heard with deep regret on Tuesday that Robert F. Wade, one of our most generally respected people, had passed away that morning. It appears that the deceased, who had been in very poor health for several years, went out for a stroll. Not returning in a short time, the family became anxious, fearing he might have been taken with an ill turn. A search was at once instituted, and his remains were found on the beach in front of his farm. The supposition is that he went down to the shore and, being about high water, walked to the edge of the tide, and either stumbled or was seized with dizziness and fell in. Mr. Wade was a man more than ordinarily well informed, strictly honorable in his dealings, and very highly esteemed by a large circle of friends. He is survived by a widow, whom he married in Cardiff, two sons—Norman, who returned a few months ago from the Klondike, and David, now on a voyage from Buenos Ayres to Africa—and one daughter, the wife of C. S. Bird, proprietor of the West Lynn Drug Store. Two brothers are still living—Seth, residing in Bear River, and Israel, in Tasmania. The funeral took place on Thursday from the Episcopal Church. Rev. Mr. Hackley officiating. He was 69 years of age.

NO GLOOM AT THIS FUNERAL.

Los Angeles, May 24.—The most peculiar funeral service ever held in this city was conducted by the Sunset Club, an exclusive organization of business men, over its departed member, Epoch Knight, yesterday afternoon. No sermon, no subdued singing, no dirge marked it. Members of the club sang "Auld Lang Syne." In place of the usual obituary address, Rev. Burt Betes Howard recalled to the members the good times they had spent with their departed comrade. At times the service was almost cheerful. Knight had arranged to the minutest detail what should be done. The parlor was converted into a floral bower; roses, sweet peas and carnations made the place look as if decked for a bride instead of for a coffin.
