

From Flora Dale, Penn.—“Enclosed please find two dollars to renew subscription for YOUNG FRIENDS' REVIEW, and to send to others for whom I wish to subscribe. One subscription is for—in the interest of her young daughter, who thinks it an excellent little paper, and merits an extended circulation, to which I can also add my testimony.”

From Boonesville, Iowa. “Enclosed please find subscription for the YOUNG FRIENDS' REVIEW for another year; we like the little paper very much.”

From Avondale, Penn.—“My granddaughter has been having the YOUNG FRIENDS' REVIEW this year, and I do enjoy to hear the reading of it so much that I thought to send for it the coming year for her. I think its contents are well calculated to awaken an interest in the youthful mind of the principles of Friends, with many other subjects of interest both for old and young. In addition will add another name.”

DEATHS.

WILLETS.—At his residence, in Purchase, Westchester County, N.Y., 11th mo., 17th, 1889, Edward Willets, in the 68th year of his age, an esteemed elder of Purchase Monthly Meeting.

His declining health was obvious to his family and friends for several years. Until about two years ago he continued active in business, and regular in the attendance of meetings when able. Since then he has been mostly confined to the house. His disease has been of such a character, that great sufferings of the physical frame was his to endure. Through all these dispensations he evinced faith and confidence in his Heavenly Father's love to sustain him. He made a happy, peaceful close. What can we say of such a life? Surely eulogistic words would be as dew before the morning sun. The lives of such speak louder sermons, and erect nobler monuments than tongue could speak or hand of sculptor build. He leaves a wife and three children, who have been untiring in their devotion to alleviate his sufferings.

'Tis hard to break the tender cord
Where love has bound the heart;
'Tis hard, so hard to speak the word,
We must forever part.

HILBORN.—At her home near Arkona on the 17th of 12th mo., 1889, of heart failure, Dorothy Hilborn, a member of Norwich Monthly Meeting of Friends, aged 72 years and 6 days.

Her husband, Levi Hilborn, died six months and six days previous, which undoubtedly hastened her death.

FIELD.—At Plainfield, N. J., on Sixth-day morning, 12th mo., 6th, of typhoid pneumonia, Mary Jane Field, in the 83rd year of her age.

In writing of the departure of this worthy Friend, a young Friend and member of the same meeting says: “In the death of Mary Jane Field our meeting has lost a dearly loved mother, one to whom we looked, and not in vain, for counsel and encouragement. Those of us who are left can scarcely realize the full extent of our loss, or the great responsibility that rests with us to uphold our meeting to the high spiritual standard to which she, with her thoroughly pure, consistent Christian life and example, held it. It seems almost impossible to me, when I think of it, that our meeting can ever seem quite the same again. Our First-day School, too, misses her sadly, for she was always at her post among the children.”

From Intelligencer and Journal :

It was with a deep sense of personal loss and bereavement that, after a brief absence, I attended here this morning our Friends' meeting, and realized that in the interim death had made vacant the accustomed place therein of our beloved friend, Mary Jane Field. To me and to mine she has been not only a tenderly loving friend, but in a certain sense, as a mother. This she has been indeed to many. Especially has she sustained relations of closest sympathy with the young. Early in its inaugura-
