

HENRY HOWARD.

CHAPTER IX.

WESTON HALL.

Tradition tells, That, in Eliza's golden days, a knight Came on a war-horse rampantly attired, And fixed his home in this sequestered vale.

WORDSWORTH.

Weston Hall, the house to which the party, consisting of the Vicar, Bradwell, and young Henry, were going, was an old-fashioned stone house, beautifully situated at the distance of little more than a mile from the town of Preston, upon the banks of the Ribbles, which flowed through the grounds, and for many miles was visible as it came down the rich valley, on whose side to the north the town was built.

The house was now very different in size and appearance from what it had been in former days. It was built in the reign of Edward III. by a Sir David Zouch, and at first had been erected in the form of a square. In this state it remained until the time of the great rebellion, when one of the Lord Zouch's, who then held the property, and was a staunch adherent of Charles, refusing to admit the forces of Fairfax, suffered a siege of six days, during which the whole of one side was battered down, and the house in other parts so seriously injured, that for many years it was left untenanted.

Towards the commencement of the eighteenth century the property passed into a younger branch of the Zouch family, whose descendants resided there until within a few years of the date of our tale, when the present possessor, taking disgust at the factories springing up on all sides of his property, determined upon leaving his house, and residing in a southern county.

In consequence of this, Weston was to be let; and a retired manufacturer, of the name of Ford, became its tenant. The house was still very large, three sides of the original square remaining; and at the time when taken by Mr. Ford, was well filled with the old-fashioned oak furniture which is so frequently to be seen in ancient mansions in the north of England.

The tradesman's friends passed many and different remarks upon his going to Weston Hall, which, from the associations connected with it, appeared to them to have a claim upon the aristocracy for a tenant. Some said, that Master Ford would soon find what it was to ape his betters; that pride must have a fall; and that it would have been much better for him to have kept in his old house in the Market-Place, where he was within a short walk of his factory.

Others said, they thought he had as much right to a good house as the Zouch's had, for they were sure he had more money, and as he was liberal-minded, that it would be far better for the tenantry on the estate to have a man who would spend his income among them, than one who took the greater part to London and spent it there.

Among these latter were the old and young ladies of Preston, and such other persons of the male gender as regarded an entrance into Weston Hall a matter of gratulation in itself; and flattered themselves that Mr. Ford's dinners would not only prove pleasant for their own intrinsic merit, but a good omen being in their idea indispensable in a house as large and important as Weston, but that the host thereof would be a very useful stepping-stone to their introduction to the Werdens, Stanleys, and other neighbouring families, who, rejoicing in the name of country people, kept themselves aloof from the plebeian folk of Preston.

In these feelings and expectations Ford and his wife partook; he fearing that he might have stepped out of his position in life by taking a place whose possessors had always been regarded as superior to the class to which he considered himself to belong;—the indulging dreams of the future advancement of the family, when the Werdens would take their place in the county with the aforesaid Werdens and Stanleys, and when her former acquaintances would look up to her as the ruling spirit in all the gaieties of Preston.

As soon as they were settled, Mrs. Ford determined upon living in a style commensurate with her new position, Mr. Ford slowly acquiescing with each change or addition that was made in the establishment. At first, the dirty boy, who, in one person, and that a very diminutive one, had performed some four or five distinct offices, was exchanged for a full-grown man, who, in Mr. Ford's idea, appeared to be a butler. In this, however, that gentleman was mistaken; as in a short time a new suit of coloured clothes, which his wife had fixed upon for the Ford lady, disclosed him to be a footman; and the lady's demand, which came shortly, for a proper butler, dissipated at once any little doubts that might have lingered in his mind on the subject.

remarks. He knew, indeed, that his wife had considerable ambition in the furniture-line, and had gone so far as to carry the arms and the crest; but that she really thought of building a church, such an idea never entered his mind. The hints, however, were left to work their way; the hard ground, she thought, might be softened, and then it would be easier to break it up and sow the seed.

In pursuance of her object, she called upon Mr. Milles, who appeared much pleased with the plan. "There was certainly a want of churches in Preston," he said; "so much so, that he was now endeavouring to raise contributions sufficient to defray the expenses of building one at Caton, a district on the south side of the town, where was a dense population of the very poorest of the people; and if another could be built on the west side, it would be of great advantage to the poor in that neighbourhood, although not so requisite as in the other spot he had mentioned."

Mrs. Ford did not much like to hear of this church at Caton, for she feared it might interfere with her plans. This, however, she did not venture to disclose; on the contrary, she expressed herself very much pleased at the prospect, and said it would be so delightful to see them growing up together like twin brothers or sisters.

After some few remarks upon this point, she asked the Vicar, as though the question had just occurred to her, whether the Zouch's had not built the parish church. "Yes," he replied; "one of them built and endowed it in the 14th century."

"That is," said the lady, "I suppose he undertook the management of it, collected the necessary funds, I wonder," continued Mrs. Ford, in the same breath, "I wonder how they collected money for building churches then; I am sure if it was by bazaars or charity-sermons, I am glad that I did not live in those days. Why, it would have taken five hundred bazaars, or more."

"With regard to the parish church," observed Mr. Milles, "I am able to tell you, that there were no such means adopted for raising funds."

"None?" repeated Mrs. Ford; "then how was the money obtained?" "One of the Zouch's," replied the Vicar, "built it at his own expense."

"What!" said the lady, apparently much shocked at the thought; "then you really believe, Mr. Milles, that the people in those days did think to purchase heaven by building churches?"

"If they did so," replied the Vicar, "of course they thought very wrong; but in this instance you need be under no such apprehension. You have probably seen a brass plate in the church, on a pillar in the nave?"

"Frequently," replied Mrs. Ford; "but never read what was upon it." "Well," continued the Vicar, "that plate, together with some ancient documents connected with the church, tell us who it was that built it, and the motives which urged him to it. A certain Sir David Zouch was returning from the French wars with the Black Prince, when, in a march towards Scotland, he became separated from the main army in this neighbourhood, and lost his way; after wandering for some time, night overtook him, and in the spot where the church stands, he stuck his spear in the ground, with a vow, that if it should please God to restore him to his friends, he would fix his residence near to the place, and on the spot itself erect a church, in remembrance of God's great goodness towards him. Having thus vowed, it appears that he waited there until the morning, when, to his great joy, he discovered some of his companions, and returned to the prince, to whom he mentioned what had happened. The prince, approving of the pious vow of his follower, obtained for him a grant of that property which the Zouch's now possess. To this place, on returning from the Scottish wars, Sir David came; and having first built and endowed the parish church, erected that mansion in which you live."

ONE MILLION AND A HALF ACRES OF LAND.

TO BE DISPOSED OF IN CANADA WEST, (LATE UPPER CANADA) NO MONEY IS REQUIRED DOWN. TO OLD SETTLERS, EMIGRANTS, AND OTHERS. THE CANADA COMPANY have for disposal the stated quantity of Land mentioned in the Printed Lists of this date. They consist of Lots from 100 to 2000 Acres, scattered throughout the Country, and most of them surrounded by Old Settlements of 50,000 Acres, in the Huron District, situated Ninety Miles South of Owen's Sound. The Lands are offered on the most Liberal Terms, and are highly beneficial to the Settlers. By this arrangement, the Company dispose of their Lands by way of LEASE, FOR A TERM OF TEN YEARS:

No Money Being Required Down. The Rents payable 1st February, in each year, being less than the Interest upon the Price. Thus, for example, suppose the Purchase Money for 100 Acres to be 12s. 6d. per Acre, which is 252 10s. The Rent required thereon is 4s.; full value being secured to the Settler by the Purchase of the Land, and the Rent being paid at the expiration of the Term, upon Payment of the price stated in the Lease. The Company will make a Liberal Allowance upon the Price, according to the period when the Settler pays, by anticipation, the amount, and thereby save himself from further Rent. These Lands, and others not included in the Leasing List, are also to be disposed of upon the Company's former plan, viz.—for Cash down, or by One-fifth Cash, and the balance in five equal Annual Installments, with Interest. In order to afford every assistance to industrious and provident Settlers, the Company will receive any sum, no matter how small, the amount may be, for which their Lessees Settlers may not have immediate want, on Deposit—allowing Interest at the rate of Six per cent. per annum for the same; but it is clearly understood, that the full amount with interest accrued, shall at all times be at the disposal of the Settler, without notice. For purpose of the Company having an account, which is termed "Settler's Rent-roll or Savings Bank Account," and affording to the provident Settler, every facility for accumulating sufficient money to purchase the Freehold of the land which he leases, whenever he chooses to do so, within the term of Ten Years; but should he have any other unforeseen misfortune visit him, he has always the amount deposited, with interest secured, at his disposal, to meet them. The advantages of this account are confined to the Company's actual Lessees Settlers, during the continuance of their Leases.

REMITTANCE OF MONIES. anxious to assist Settlers, and others desirous of sending home Monies to their Friends, the Company will engage to place the amount in the hands of the parties for whom they are destined, free of all cost and expense, thus saving the Settlers all care and trouble in the business. The Company last year remitted to the United Kingdom and Germany nearly £2,000,000, in 250,000 letters, averaging about £8 each; by this means, and during the last four months, they have already sent home a similar amount. The arrangements of the Company for this purpose are so complete, that the sums are placed in the parties hands in Europe, free from any deduction, within about three days from the arrival of the Mail in England, accompanied by every facility of useful information upon Canada. The Company will also remit any sum of money from Europe to Canada, by Letters of Credit upon their Commissioners in the Province, free of expense, thus insuring the benefit of the premium of the Bank of Montreal, and likewise saving him from the inconvenience and too frequent loss of money from being obliged to remit with him in coin. The Company, with a view to accommodate Emigrants having no immediate use for their funds, will allow interest, at Four per cent. per annum, for Money left with them for any period not less than Sixty Days;—the money, however, being always at the Emigrant's disposal, without notice. Every kind of information upon Canada, and directions, that can possibly be useful to intending Emigrants to Canada, will be readily furnished, by the undersigned, or by letter, to the Company's Office in England—Canada House, St. Helen's Place, Bishopsgate-Street, London. The new printed Lists of Lands, which may be seen in every Post-Office and Store in Canada West, and in any particulars, may be obtained, upon the request of the undersigned, or by application in writing to the Company's Office, at Goderich, as regards the Huron Lands; or at Frederick Street, Toronto, as to all other Lands and Remittances of Money.
