

The general outline of these programs is already known. The young people will spend three days in Ottawa familiarizing themselves with their surroundings, with the Canadian political structure and with life in Canada in general. They will then head for Montreal, and will be in the province of Quebec from August 5 to 18. The 32 will then be divided into three groups; half will spend a week in Ontario while the other half divides itself between Manitoba and New Brunswick for a similar period. The group will be reunited finally in Montreal on August 25 to evaluate their experiences, and will leave for Paris the next day.

General suggestions concerning programs of activities were forwarded to participating countries by the Agency, and they will include meetings with young people from various sectors of the community, seminars on our social, economic and cultural institutions, visits to industrial establishments, social centres and historic sites, and a wide variety of cultural activities.
