PRESENTATION OF PRIZES BISHOP STRACHAN SCHOOL

Many Prominent Churchmen Present at Closing Exercises and Reception.

Many of Toronto's prominent citizens, clerical and lay, were present at the closing exercises and reception at the Bishop Strachan School last night. Everything conspired to make the function a success: a brilliant assemblage, cheerful, harmonious decorations and a select, well-performed program being a few of the many attractions. The program included vocal and instrumental solos and part songs by the singing class, and particular mention should be given to two selections by Miss Jessie Allen, whose magnificent singing was highly appreciated and warmly applauded by the large audience.

Grafting Among Women

One of our leading journals has recently been starting a crusade against women grafters. This paper has also taken part in protesting against the bride grafter, and a higher stand will have to be taken by the woman of the future if she wishes to preserve her reputation for honesty. But there are certain aspects of this question which might be more fairly viewed by the men.

We hear constantly of the woman who rises at 3 a.m. to pick her husband's pocket, of the woman who collects souvenir spoons, etc. But what about the bride who doesn't make her wife a regular allowance? What about the bride whose men acquaintances have so long made her house a rendezvous for themselves and their women friends that patience was nearly at an end on the part of the bridegroom on members of the party who come to see the visiting friend or cousin, stay for tea, and take the young lady out, ignoring the bride-to-be because she is engaged (yes, and often long before she has any idea of being engaged), on the score that "Oh, well, Tom's her fellow, and he'll take her out." How about the women who go to visit the girl with a wide acquaintance because they will meet men there? There are two sides to every question.

Nevertheless, there is a contemptible meanness in stealing your hostess's spoons, in forcing presents from chance acquaintances and in absolutely phoning the brigand on members of your own family, which surely ought to be despised by every true woman.

It has its funny side, too. I know a young girl who complains that since negligé collars have come in she can't keep a single nice tie on account of the socialistic age.

Recently he heard a woman suffragist advocate the wearing of men's clothes. "Why," exclaimed the unfortunate young man, "I should have to get up early every morning if I wanted anything at all to wear." This is indeed the socialistic age.

But there is one form of grafting among women which is more detestable than any other. It is when a woman deliberately lays out to make trouble between her women friends and their acquaintances of the other sex, that we see her meanest qualities displayed. Girls who would not steal, who are horrified at the idea of murder, deliberately ruin the lives of their friends, their dearest friends as a legitimate pastime. "This is no grafting," some one says, "It is intrigue."

I call it grafting advisedly. It is done for the same purpose and no other, than to injure a woman who has a man friend who takes her out, who plans little parties for her enjoyment, who unselfishly tries to give her a good time. In a moment every girl of her set is "fairly wild," as they say, to get an introduction. "He will do as much for us" is the idea. All sorts of schemes are worked to make the man believe his friends think little of him, and to separate them. When a clever young woman finally succeeds, it simply means that the man is added to a train of admirers obtained in the same unscrupulous way. He soon sees the point—he never dreams of marrying the second girl, who probably doesn't want him anyway, and two lives are spoiled for the sake of pure graft.

1000 Islands, Rapids of St. Lawrence, Quebec, Canada.
The most delightful scenic line I have ever traveled over is the common remark of our cousins across the line when traveling on the handsome day coaches of the Grand Trunk Railway System, leaving Toronto at 9:00 a.m., which skirts along Lake Ontario shore and along the noble St. Lawrence. Combined with reasonable fast service, perfect double-tracked roadbed, hooded coaches, cafe parlor car (meals a la carte) and thru Pullmans to Montreal, Portland and Boston without change, it is no wonder Canada's pioneer line keeps to the front. Night expresses leave at 9:00 and 10:15 p.m., with Montreal sleepers, and also the Kingston Wharf sleeper, so that if you want a 12-hour trip by boat thru the islands or rapids you can have it. Get copy of tourist folder at City Ticket Office, northwest corner King and Yonge-streets, or address J. D. McDonald, D.P.A., Toronto.
