

LIVING DRAMA IS ENACTED IN CAILLAUX TRIAL

Touches Are Added by Collapse of Prisoner and Challenge of Judge—Rivals Thaw Trial

LOVE LETTERS ARE READ IN COURT

PARIS, July 25.—The chief judge challenging one of his colleagues to a duel, the reading of the "mysterious" letters which were supposed to affect the case so profoundly, and the physical collapse in court of Madame Caillaux were three incidents which today stirred the emotions in connection with the trial of Madame Caillaux for the murder of Gaston Calmette.

A peculiarly French atmosphere was lent to the affair by the quarrel of the judges. This was added to by the piquant contents of the former premier's love letters, whose recital before the public caused the prisoner to fall unconscious and to remain for a long time in a swoon.

Beyond the reading of the letters little progress was made and it was generally expected that the trial would extend far into next week. The letters read in court today were not, as had been generally assumed, those which were supposed to have been in the hands of the assassinated editor, and the threat of whose publication was understood to have driven Madame Caillaux to commit the crime.

After her collapse Mme. Caillaux had been laid upon a bench in an ante room where she was surrounded by doctors. Out of the republican guards took of his tunic and made a pillow for her. The physicians who had thought she was suffering merely from a passing fainting spell, decided when she remained unconscious, to give her a hypodermic injection of ether.

Madame Caillaux appeared to have broken down completely and was breathing with difficulty and such was her condition that her husband was admitted to her side. When she returned more letters were read. The letters were written in the second person singular, indicating the closest friendship. The first of them said:

"My dear little Riri (an affectionate diminutive for Henriette): When I met thee I felt the impulsion of all my being toward thee. I was unhappy. I was humiliated and wounded. I threw myself towards thee with a ferocious passion. With splendid courage thou hast recovered thy liberty asking of me but one promise—to give thee my life. There was between another person and myself such a difference of character—"

Prisoner Shaken. While this portion of the letter was being read Madame Caillaux disappeared completely behind the side of the prisoner's enclosure and her crumpled body was shaken with nervous tremors. The reading continued:

"We have everything to fear from a woman's fury." Special to The Sunday World. M. Caillaux, in his missive, then entered into details of the local political situation and other matters and said he thought he might not enter the contest at the general election for the chamber of deputies in 1910.
