At the Imperial Monday

THOUSANDS OF ST. JOHN PEOPLE HAVE READ THIS UNUSUAL NOVEL. Some were mildly shocked because of the author's daring in exposing certain preying (not preying) types of wealthy women; others were level-headed enough to realize it was only too faithful a portrayal. The "Glimpses of the Moon" the newly wedded couple enjoyed were privileges accorded them when innocently occupying the castle of a wealthy adventuress who was scampering over Europe unaccompanied by her husband. When the idealistic bridegroom discovers his wife is party to this plot of infidelity he rebels and bang goes another wedding! All this in London, Venice, Switzerland with wealth, high society and wonderful raiment in every scene.

Besides youthful Bebe Daniels and the super-emerita Nita Naldi in this elaborate production we have David Powell, the old Vitaphone favorite Maurice Costello and a half dozen other stage and film notables.

THE RURAL ROMANCE

"A FRONT PAGE STORY"

TALK ABOUT OUR HYDRO SCRAP here in St. John and the battle the newspapers are having among themselves with the civic officials in the direct line of fire, but just come and see the fight an old village editor put up against the Mayor of his town. Say, it was a corker! The Mayor and the Editor shook their respective fists under one another's noses daily. Then along came a fellow out of work—one of those happy-go-luckies. When he took hold of the newspaper's fight it was a clean-up. The brightest, cleanest, oddest and happiest picture in months.

Massachusetts Ornithologist

Tells Stories of Hardships on Coast and in Interior.

Boston, April 7.—Edward Howe Forbush, state ornithologist, reporting today on birds that wintered in New England, said:

"Along the Maine coast the ice blockade held all winter. Many starving black ducks succumbed. Eagles, crows, gulls and foxes fell upon the starving birds. Along the coast of Nova Scotia, where approximately 1,000 geese winter, conditions are even worse, and many are said to have perished.

"Queer tales come from the rivers and forests of the interior; an eagle falling frozen from its perch; a horned owl standing dead and frozen on a limb; a heron frozen upright in the ice; many little birds dead on the snow; a squirrel drinking at a spring and its wet feet soon after rigidly frozen to a piece of iron—all incidents of the stark implacable New England winter.

"Yet delicate birds lasted through it all. Robins and even tiny kinglets survived temperatures of forty below zero."

In 1880 out of every 1,000 negroes of ten years of age and over, in the United States, 700 were illiterate. In 1920 this 700 had been reduced to 224.
