ir. Bryan made no apology for aking on a religious theme. He aid that while his time and thought ad been given to the problems of rnment and would still be given that subject, and while he made erous political speeches and would ontinue to do so, he preferred making a religious speech. In politics it s necessary to convince a majority of the people to think as you think in der that your ideas might be carried into practice, and he naively added, it task appeared to be; but in religion if you could impress one heart and life FALL ASSIZES OPEN with a higher aim the speech was a success. He hoped to be able to help some one to a stronger faith in Goo by his words as he delivered the address of the evening. The lecturer then plunged right into his subject and as he laid the foundations for his faith in very beginnings of Bible history one could not hel realizing the strength and virility of the man himself. In spite of years of trenuous political life he stood before the audience as a champion of Christan faith and was using his charms oratory to strengthen the faith of audience. It did not seem a stepg aside for one moment from his work, but rather one felt it to the real conviction of the orator eaker.
