Dropped Candidates May Re-enter Again

Ladies Who Dropped Out at Start of Contest Can Now See Chance to Win a Trip--It is Not Too Late to Enter Again.

Several ladies who were nominated at the start of the contest, and for some reason told the contest manager that they were withdrawing their names, have been sitting up and taking notice during the last few days. In most cases reported, these ladies have expressed their regrets on deciding too quickly not to run. Almost everyone has looked over the vote standing in her district and can count up enough friends to subscribe for The Standard or New Star to put her well in the lead in her district. To all of these ladies we would say that their name can be re-inserted at any time, and the sooner the better. It is not too late to enter and win, but if you put it off until the end you will then see how easy it would have been to win out over So and So. Do not delay another day, call or write to the Contest Manager and he will call on you and get you started.

Any lady can nominate herself, or a friend can do so for her—and this can be done at any time during the contest—even to the last week. In many instances the winner of a district has not entered until she has found out what kind of a chance she has. Then finding that a few early subscribers would put her in the lead she has enlisted the support of her friends and surprised everybody by the size of her vote. Such will happen in The Standard and New Star contest, and probably the winner in many of the districts has not yet been heard from. The next month will be the most exciting period of the contest, all that has happened so far has but trained our ladies for the struggle. They know now how to get votes. Their friends are collecting for them week by week, and are giving them paid in advance subscriptions. These are what count, and the lady who gets a few friends to help her that way will make the biggest showing, and finally lead her district.

Now, with a little exertion, you can have this trip and be under obligations to no one, and have besides the pleasure of realizing how many friends you have, how many new ones you have made as a result of The Standard and New Star offer. Besides on this trip you will see everything worth an experienced guide to point out and explain everything. You won't have to worry about what hotel to stop at or whether it is a nice place. This has all been provided for before your arrival. They will be ready and willing to welcome you.

At this day and date people do not give you anything if you do not show a disposition to strive for it. All of the contestants have legions of friends who would help them with votes and subscriptions if they would ask for them, but you will have to bear in mind, old saying, "What is not worth asking for is not worth having."

When depositing the clipped coupons in the ballot box contestants and their friends are asked to see that the bundles of ballots are securely tied or placed in envelopes, in order to facilitate their counting. When voting in this manner the contestant's name need not be written on each separate ballot, thus making less trouble in their preparation for being voted.

We have letters for contestants to mail to their friends saying they have entered the contest and want to win. These may be had at the office of The Standard and New Star or will be mailed to any who desire them.

We would urge everyone seriously intending to win to mail these letters to their friends as they will bring results. The Contest Manager strolled around yesterday and had some pleasant visits with a few of the active candidates and several prospective ones. He was greatly impressed by the necessity of the vote-getters enlisting the support of a hustling campaign manager, like any live politician would, to boost their candidacy.

A campaign manager can be anyone who is properly interested and comes in contact with enough people. Perhaps the very individual who appears to you to be always assiduously endeavoring to efface himself might be the very one who carries the most influence. Have a little "heart to heart" talk with him and fill him with enthusiasm. There are scores of bright, breezy, popular young men who are just plugging to be asked. How about that real live brother?—if not your own, then some other girl's brother. Or dear old dad or girl friends; or that nice young man; perhaps some man in your office—you know the one we mean—the one "that everybody likes." Any of these and a lot more will make fine managers for your campaign.

We cannot overlook the uncles, either, for one new entrant has interested her uncle and when you see what they will do between them in yill convince you "we know whereof we speak."

You see, men go to lots and lots of places where votes galore can be secured, but where ladies never go. So take a friendly hand based on experience. Tussle around "imagine" and secure a good masculine campaign manager. Better still, get two or three if you can.

Up to date your campaign may have been rolling along as smoothly as a perfect "buzz wagon" on a macadam road, but some day there will come a hitch in the easy running. You will be down in the dumps. You will need some wise counsel to infuse new life and energy into your campaign. Probably a different plan of action will be required. That's where H.C. comes in, with cool-headed suggestions and encouragements. That is the time when you will appreciate the worth of a man in a woman's contest.

Now, at this right, it is nothing more important than picking a pilot (and a captain and first mate if you can secure them), to safely guide your ship of effort through the channel of progress to the harbor of success. Who's going to be yours?
