he brewery. The interpreter having handed in a letter of infroduction from Baron Rothschild to the chief clerk, the party were at once shown into the chief office, where it is customary for visitors to write their names in the visitors' book. The Marshal having written "Haynau" in rather a bold style, he was consigned to one of the sevants to conduct him over the brewery. The moment he quitted, a commotion was visible in the office, and ere many minutes had etapsed, several of the clerks and collectors were seen to leave the brewery hastily, and in a short sneet of time the cart-clerks and collectors were seen to leave the brew-ery hastily, and in a short space of time the cart-ers, draymen, and others from the opposite gre-mises of the establishment, with a host of laborers from the neighboring Borough Market, congre-gated outside the gates of the brewery. Some of them were armed with long carters whips, and others had long cane brooms. The General had others had long cane brooms. The General had been shown over most of the departments, and had arrived at the stables, when the series of assaults commenced. He was about entering the lower stalls, when a heavy truss of straw was thrown out from the loft above; it fell upon his head, and knocked him to the greened with knocked him to the ground with much force.

Having regained his legs, missiles of the most of ving regainer his segs, missive or the most of-sive character was thrown into his face; and as his evident that a furious storm was brewing hist the party, their hasty retrest was sug-

The shal, with his nephew and interpreter, botted across the yard, and on reaching the street, they were met with the most fearful yells and executions from the snob who had collected outside the enfrom the does who had corrected beautiful trance gates. Indeed it is scarcely possible, we are assured, to convey an accurate idea of the horrible noise that burst forth from the populace when the affiighted General appeared. He was allowed to reach about the middle of the street, when some to reach about the middle of the street, when some of the earters, who were in waiting with their heavy whips, cried out, "Oh, this is the fellow that flogged the women, is it!" and instantly commenced lashing him with all their might. The ma shal then quickened his speed, but the mob, which had considerably increased by the arrival of a number of coal heavers from Bankside, crowded and him and all the could get near him were nd him, and all that could get near him were

With some difficulty he contrived to reach the centre of Bynkside, when he was knocked dows, and an attempt was made by the more excit d of the populace to drag him away—it is thought, for the purpose of throwing him into the Thames. His nephew and interpreter, however, managedto keep hold of him, and got him upon his legs. He then made another effort to get away between his attendants. The mob, however, followed him up, and lashed, pelted, and hooted him in the most furious style. He was flogged with whips, struck over the back with the brooms, beaten with the coal-heavers "a fan tail" hats, while an unremitting shower of filth was levelled at him.

Several gentlemen who witnessed the attack, male an attempt to protect the Marshal, who appeared to be fast sinking from exhaustion and ill usage, while his interpreter implored the mob not to kill him. Two young men in the service of Mr. Winter, ironmonger, in Bankside, met the men, and endeavored to restrain them. "He is a murderer," was the raply. "We won't have him here, the Austrian butcher; we'll teach him to flog women." Another rush was made at him is hat was thrown high into the air, amid loud derisive shouts, and his clothes nearly torn off his back. His moustache and beard were pulled in the most violent manner; and one man, who had in his hand a large bladed knife, caught hold of the Marshal's beard, and made a strong effort to cut it off. By this time, the party had reached the George public house, in Bankside, near Southwark bridge, kept by Mr. Benfeild, and in the confusion the General succeeded in getting from the most violent manner; and one man, who had in his hand a large bladed knife, caught hold of the Marshal's beard, and made a strong effort to cut it off. By this time,

Several rooms were entered, but the Marshal could not be from were entered, but the Marshal could not be found, and it was supposed he had been concealed. The mab then became impatient, and would sten to nothing else thas his production. Several men scaled the front of the house, and got into prefer were found on the landing, but the object

In a few moments, a loud yell proceeded from the back part of the premises, some coatheavers had discovered the Marshal crourched in a dust bin attached to the house. By the hair of the head they dragged him out, shouting "We have got the Austrian woman flogger!" This announcement was received with almost frantic cheers by the mob outside the house, and the Marshal was about being dragged along the passage into the streets, when his cries attracted the sympathy of some strangers, who, with the aid of his nephew and interpreter, succeeded in getting him from the grasp of his assailants, and in locking him up in one of the bedrooms, while others stood seatry at the door, and prevented it being forced. Mr. Benfeild, the landford, endeavored to appease the mob. They replied, however, that if the wretch Benfeild, the landlord, endeavored to appease the mob. They replied, however, that if the wretch was not given up, they would puil the house down. Most fortunately Mr. Benfeild, at the first rush into his house, and fearing that it would really be demolished, sent for a policeman, who arrived just at the time the threats were being and the time the threats were being the first to take the state of the sta made; and it being dangerous for him to act alone, he ran to the police-station for further aid. A strong body of the force soon arrived, and their appearance at once quelled the fury of the populace. The Inspector, on entering the house, found appearance at ones queried the tiny or the papearance. The Inspector, on entering the house, found the General seated on the edge of a bed in a pitiable condition. He was much exhausted, and in his own language complained severely of the pain he endured from the injuries inflicted upon him.

upon him.

Having partaken of some slight refreshment
the inspector assured him, through the interpreter that he might consider himself perfectly safe under his care, as he had a body of officers down below that he might canader himself perfectly safe under his care, as he had a body of officers down below to protect him. It was some time, however, ere he could be induced to believe that he was free from further violence. His torn garments having been temporarily repaired by the interpreter, and Mr. Benfeild having lest him a hat, he centured to make for the Thames Police galley that was lying at the foot of the stairs fronting the George. Getting safely into the boat, it was rowed to Waterloo Bridge. A cab was then procured, and the exhausted Marshal was conveyed to Morley's Hotel, Charing cross. It should be mentioned, however, that when he took his departure from Bankside, he was greeted with yells, and his hat was thrown into the river after him.

During the remainder of the day, the General was confined to his hed at his hotel. On Friday, he was still suffering from the injuries he had sustained. He was visited by several of the Austrian nobles and other residents in London; and in order to avoid the recurrence of a similar display of feeting, arrangements were made for his quitting England, and in the coarse of Friday, high, we are informed, he took his leave.

The tangled thread of Germ a politics is apparently, about to be cut by Austria. The limited of estricted Germanic Diet- that is, the form of resembation of the various states in which the test are extracted to a lower appropriate to an extraction of the state of the s presentation of the various states in which the votes are restricted to a lower proportionate number than in the Fletum—met at Frankfort on the 2d instant, under the presid-ncy of Austria. The powers represented at the Dict are Austria, Bavaria, Wurtemburg, Hanover, Saxony, Electoral Hesse, Darmstadt, Denmark for Holland, Holland for Luxembourg, Mecklinburg, Streitz, and Lippe Detmold. Prussia and her allies, who would have a majority of votes if present, have relused to take any part in the proceedings, and will not recognise the Diet in any way whalever. They declare that the Germanic Confederation died a segal death in the Diet in any way whatever. They declare that the Germanic Coolederation died asgal death in March, 1848; that Austria has no power to revive it, suid that they shall disregard the resolutions of the so-called Diet. On the other hand, Austria and her allies have signified their determination to make their resolution and acts respected, even by a force of arms. This important fact is said to have been officially notified by Austria to the French and English Governments. If this be so, and the rival parties adhere to their present determinations, the question of German Unity may yet precipitate Germany into the conflict which has been foreboded. The semi-official papers of Berlin, of the Sth, state that a declaration has been received from England and France, setting forth that those powers will not be represented at the sitting of any federal a sembly in which Prussia refuses to take a part.

A constitutional conflict has arisen in Hesse Cassel. The new Chamber of States, which met about a fortnight ago, has proved as staunch as its predecessor. It refused to vote the direct taxes in the way demanded by the notorious and unpopular Minister, Hassenpflug, and the result was, that off the 2nd instant it was dissolved, after a week's sittings, and a new Chamber is to be realled within six months. The members separated with three cheers for the constitution, and some persons in the gallery called for a curse for Hassenpflug. Perment in Resse Cassel.

The War Swamped.

The continued rains have made any attempt to renew operations in the field impossible; it was of course well known to the commanders, but to the mass of the troops it is necessary to prove this impossibility by a practical experiment. For this reason the reconnoissance toward Frederichstand was undertaken; having seen with their own eyes that the flat meadows around that town were all under water, in some places so deep that only the roots of many bouses were to be seen above it, the troops returned to their quarters. To the north of Frederichstadt the Danes have established a perminent camp, near Ramstedt; between this place and Stollingheasen, the marshes have been flooded, not only by the natural heavy rain, but by a dam thrown across the Treene. In fact, the whole of the terrain northwest of Rendsburgh may be considered impassable for any military purpose; and notwithstanding the discontent of the Germans generally, at the present state of inaction, any movement appears esent state of inaction, any me
