AN OLD HEALTH GOSPEL.

(Ottawa Citizen)

In these days when new alleged cures for diseases are being brought forward it is well to remember that, in real improvement has been made, upon the old health gospel of sunshine and the open air. These two are the constituent elements of nature's health formula, upon which science itself has not been able to improve. Science may work a cure for ill-health, but the secret of health itself is in the obedience of natural laws and the living of normal life. And since health is a bequest from the child to the man, the health question primarily concerns childhood. The child who lives largely in the open, with exercise that fills the lungs with fresh air and who sleeps by a window that is not closed to keep health out, has greater chances of sturdy life. Of all the modern cures back to the land, to simplicity, to nature, there is not one more rational than which accepts as true and wise the gospel of sunshine and the open air. It becomes the chief purpose of modern society to see to it that the children of to-day shall be given the utmost chances to avail themselves of its truth and wisdom. Sunshine is better than serum, and a capital substitute, for it.

VOTES AND HUSBANDS.

(Chicago Tribune)

Women suffrage is assailed from a new angle. A German writer sees in it a "world peril." The militant suffragists, the writer declares, are losing sight of everything else but their "cause." The result is that a number of the leading advocates of votes for women have not exercised discretion in the choice of husbands. Despite their keenness as "politicians," they fell victims to the flattery of rakes.

This leads the writer to conclude, with a great deal of alarm, that women suffrage will put a premium on rakes. The alarm is wholly unnecessary. That a few zealous supporters of the suffrage movement have chosen unworthy husbands is an evil, but it is one which will have the ballot they will lose the sense of discrimination they now possess. The ballot will raise the woman to a higher plane economically and socially. The emancipated woman will get better wages. She will work fewer hours and will be relieved of the indignities which the now suffers in industry. She will have more time for culture, for reading, and pleasure. She will live rather than deteriorate the home.

Under present conditions women are not infrequently forced into unequal marriages because the man is a good provider, a sort of a meat ticket. When life for women will become easier she will not marry to escape the conditions in factories and shops. There will be no more intolerable conditions for her than there will be for man. She will exercise greater independence and deliberation in the choice of a husband.

TO THAW OUT FROZEN PIPES.

It is no small catastrophe to have an exposed pipe in your house freeze, nor is the plumber's bill to be despised. The man of the house can easily do his own plumbing in this event, and at no cost. Heat a fireless cooker stone rather hot and pour it against the pipe. There is no danger of fire if an asbestos lid is used to protect any woodwork near. In a few minutes the ice-plug is loosened. KEPT HIS WORD.

Rubinstein After Death Revisited His Friend.

One wild and blustering night I found myself at dinner along with Rubinstein, the weather being terrific even for St. Petersburg. The winds were howling round the house, and Rubinstein, who liked to ask questions, inquired of me what they represented to my mind. I replied: "The moaning of lost souls." From this a theological discussion followed.

"There may be a future," he said.

"There is a future," I cried, "a great and beautiful future. If I die first I shall come to you and prove this."

He turned to me with great solemnity. "Good, Liloscha, that is a bargain; and I will come to you."

Six years later in Paris I woke one night with a cry of agony and despair ringing in my ears, such as I hope may never be duplicated in my lifetime. Rubinstein's face was close to mine, a countenance distorted by every phase of fear, despair, agony, remorse and anger. I started up, turned on all the lights, and stood for a moment shaking in every limb, till I put fear from me and decided that it was merely a dream. I had for the moment completely forgotten our compact. News is always late in Paris, and it was Le Petit Journal published in the morning, that had the first account of his sudden death.

Four years later, Teresa Carreno, who had just come from Russia and was touring America—I had met her in St. Petersburg frequently at Rubinstein's dinner table—told me that Rubinstein died with a cry of agony impossible of description. I knew then that even in death Rubinstein had kept, as he always did, his word.—Lillian Niehman, in Harper's Weekly.

EVADING A FEUD.

How Kentucky Families Were Made Friends.

To aid parents and teachers in the selection of the best books for children to read, lectures are given at the public library with an exhibit of books. Addresses were made by George F. Bowerman, the librarian, and Miss Clara W. Herbert, the children's librarian.

"A good book for children," said Miss Herbert, "should have ethical value, vitality and interest, a large vocabulary, a fine element for things and people that are admirable, simplicity of incident and lack of morbid introspection. The right book at the right time is important."

"To form a quick judgment as to the merits of a book when at the book counter, one may be guided a little by a consideration of the author's name and reputation, and also the reputation of the publisher. Something can be learned from the makeup of the book, cheap paper and cheap illustrations are apt to indicate a cheap book. If a book is one of information, the subject should be known to be of interest to children, and a brief glance over the pages will give one an idea of whether the matter is handled in an interesting way."—Washington Star.

Coffee Jelly—A jelly is always a pretty and a delicate addition to any menu. Often it can be made beforehand so that it will be ready to serve without trouble. To make coffee jelly, take 12 box of gelatin, soaked 12 hour in 1 cup of cold water. Then add 3 cups of boiling coffee. Cool in a mould. Serve with whipped cream and sugar.

Coffee Mousse.—Three-fourths of a cup of strong coffee, 1 cup of sugar and 1 pint of cream, yolks of 2 eggs. Beat the eggs and sugar together, and the coffee. Cook in a double boiler 4 minutes, stirring constantly. Cool, stirring frequently. Whip the cream, mix the custard with it and freeze without stirring. Tapioca Cream—Four tablespoonsful of tapioca soaked over night in 1 quart of milk. In the morning sweeten to taste and boil till it thickens—not too thick—stirring all the time. Beat the yolks and whites of 4 eggs separately. Stir in the yolks, then the whites, slowly. Flavor with vanilla. Serve cold.

Dear Sir:—

In regard to the sale of SANOL and SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES I might say I have been handling the goods for about three months. I believe, however, I have sent a testimonial to your office. Another customer ordered SANOL and I was obliged to stock it. This gentleman was so well satisfied that he has sent bottles to his friends. Up to this time I have never really taken much interest in the preparations, but when customer after customer would come in and tell me what SANOL had done for them I came to the conclusion it would be worth my while getting behind SANOL and recommending it to my customers. This I have done, and I have heard nothing but words of praise for SANOL and SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES. I am Yours truly,

Austin's Drug store, P. J. Hamlyn, Mgr.

EXPERIENCE TEACHES.

(Philadelphia Record)

Starvation is bringing some of the German worshippers of "protection" to a more reasonable frame of mind. Municipal meat shops have been opened for the sale of frozen meats—Australian mutton and Russian beef and mutton. There has been no remission of tariff rates to sufficiently cheapen imported supplies, but the necessity for this municipal intervention is significantly demonstrated by official statistics just published, showing that the slaughter of live stock in many in the last quarter of 1912 was 100,000 less than in 1911; whereas the slaughter of horses was 25 per cent. more than in 1911—an increase of 33 per cent.—and the slaughter of dogs showed a 50 per cent. increase.

PITCAIRN ISLAND.

Inhabitants Number 150; Total Wealth is $500.

The Pitcairn Islanders do not often have visitors, but recently the inhabitants of this romantic island were visited by Robert Hesketh, F. C. I. S., while on his way from Valparaiso to Sydney. On his return to modern civilization, Mr. Hesketh had some interesting things to say about the life of this strange little colony.

The population now consists solely of Seventh Day Adventists and numbers 150 all told. They have a school and a church, and the schoolmaster is preacher as well as medical adviser. There are sixty-seven children under sixteen. The food of the islanders consists of sweet potatoes, a little corn, a few yams, pumpkins and tropical fruits. The total wealth of the islanders in English coin is about $10.

The government of the island is conducted by a chief magistrate-in-council, in internal committee, comprising the chief magistrate-in-council, two assessors, a chairman of the internal committee and a government secretary. These positions are all honorary. All persons over eighteen years of age, whether male or female, have a vote, and each elector can cast five votes—one for each officer. The elections are held between Christmas and New Year.

Law cases involving a penalty of under $5 can be tried by the Chief Magistrate, but over this amount two assessors have to be associated with him. When a man is fined, there being little or no money on the island, he has to work it out by repairing the roads. The day's work is started and concluded with religious ceremony, and the majority of colonists retire at sundown.—London Evening Standard.

SUICIDE OR HEROISM?

(Woodstock Sentinel Review)

Suppose a man to be afflicted by an incurable and contagious disease; supposing that realizing the burden he was to his wife and family or to his friends, and the danger of communicating his disease to them, and knowing that there was no hope for him, he were to walk out of the house, not into a blizzard that meant certain death, but into a river where death would be just as certain as in the blizzard, would the world rise up and proclaim him a hero? Does the chorus of admiration with which the story of Capt. Gates has been received mean that in the estimation of the world a man is justified in sacrificing his life to his family or to his friends, or that the story reached the world in a dramatic form as to compel admiration without reference to any question of wisdom or ethics?

THE FOUNDATION OF BUSINESS

(Ottawa Free Press)

A young man in Ottawa, the owner of no property, and with but a moderate salary borrowed $400 recently from a bank in this city. On the same day as this transaction was put through, the same bank refused a similar loan to another citizen whose salary was considerably more, and who was the owner of some urban property. The explanation given was that the "moral" rest in the first instance, was so much better than on the second case, that it overbalanced the security that the owner of property gave. The bank preferred to finance a dishonest man without property, to trusting a doubtful character who had the means to pay, but who might endeavor to evade his obligations through some technicality.

This is true of all business, that character counts considerably more in finance or commerce, than careless and oftentimes cynical statements would lead the public to believe.

SHOULD CARE FOR CRIPPLES.

(Stratford Beacon)

It is proposed to prohibit cripples and other objects of pity who sell pencils, shoe laces, etc., on the streets from doing so in Detroit. The mayor is of the opinion that they are an eyesore to the city. He is about right. The spirit that animates some of them, to earn their own living, though they are placed at a disadvantage, is commendable. Others of them are simple beggars under a thin guise. The municipality should provide for those who are so crippled as to be unable to earn a livelihood.

13-STORY SKYSCRAPERS.

(Philadelphia Record)

An insurance paper that has taken the trouble to make a census of the skyscrapers of Manhattan has made the curious discovery that notwithstanding the current superstition, buildings 13 stories high are preferred to all others. Thus there are 181 structures of 13 stories, 12 of 12 stories, 89 of 14 stories, and 47 of 15 stories. From that figure the number rapidly declines. In all there are 153 buildings that are 30 or more stories in height. Doubtless there is some very excellent reason why a building of 13 stories has the call over all other skyscrapers, but it is not set forth. Evidently the owner of these structures are impervious to superstition.

TOO MANY RABBITS.

The Unknown Man Whom Australia Curses.

In the early days of Australian settlement—just when, nobly, can say—some well-meaning emigrant sailed from old England, taking with him, among his most cherished possessions, a couple of pairs of rabbits, probably the pets of his children. The name of that pioneer is now chronicled in Australian history. He may have been a most worthy man—a man whose life and works in the country of his adoption might very well have earned for him the greatest respect and regard, but nothing he did or could have done would be sufficient to wipe out his terrible blunder. His name, whatever it may have been, is anathema; his memory is vile; his folly unforgettable.

This pioneer may have had the best intentions in the world. When Australians speak of him they admit that possibility, but in their anger they refuse to accept it as an extenuation of his heinous conduct. They are ready to believe that in England the rabbit is harmless. They know that in England "bunny"
