

ADVERTISE! ADVERTISE!

Ye men of business, stop this way—Please notice what I have to say;
'Tis simply this, I would advise, Don't you forget to advertise.

Suppose the cost is rather high,
'Twill bring good interest by and by;
And all the world can but despise
The man who will not advertise.

Why should you wait, it will not pay, Send in your orders right away,
For all the people with eager eyes Are waiting for you to advertise.

The ACADIAN, friends, is just the thing, It cannot fail success to bring,
If you would be accorded wise,
Then in the ACADIAN Advertise.

THE PRINTER BOY.

About the year 1725, an American boy, Some thirteen years old found himself in London, where he was under the necessity of earning his bread. He was not like many young men in these days, who wander around seeking work, and who are "willing to do anything" because they know how to do nothing; but he had learned how to do something and knew just where to go to find something to do; so he went straight to a printing office, and enquired if he could get employment.

"Where are you from?" inquired the foreman.

"America," was the answer.

"Ah," said the foreman, "from America! a lad from America seeking employment as a printer! Well, do you really understand the art of printing? Can you set type?"

The young man stepped to one of the cases, and in a brief space set up the following passage from the first chapter of John:

"Nathaniel said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?
Philip said unto him, Come and see."

It was done so quickly, so accurately, and administered a delicate reproof so appropriate and powerful, that it at once gave him influence and standing with all in the office. He worked diligently at his trade, refused to drink beer and strong drink, saved his money, returned to America, became a printer, publisher, author, Postmaster-General, member of Congress, signer of the Declaration of Independence, Ambassador to royal courts, and finally died in Philadelphia, April 17th, 1790, at the age of eighty-four full of years and honors; and there are now more than a hundred and fifty counties, towns and villages in America, named after that same printer boy, Benjamin Franklin; the author of "Poor Richard's Almanac."—Allen's Juvenile Gem.

OVER A COFFIN LID.

"She was a good wife—to me.
A good wife, God bless her!"

The words were spoken in trembling accents over a coffin lid. The woman sleep there had borne the heat and burden of life's long day, and no one had ever heard her murmur; her hand was quick to reach out in a helping grasp to those who fell by the wayside, and her feet were swift on errands of mercy; the heart of her husband had trusted in her; he had left her to long hours of solitude, while he amused himself in scenes in which she had no part. When boon companions deserted him, when fickle affection selfishly departed, when pleasure palled, he went home and found her waiting for him.

"Come from your long, long roving,
On life's sea so black and rough, Come to me tender and loving,
And I shall be blessed enough."

That had been her love song—always on her lips or in her heart. Children had been born to them. She had reared them almost alone—they were gone!
Her hand had led them to the uttermost edge of the morning that has no noon.
Then she had comforted him and sent him strong and whole-hearted while she stayed at home—and cried. What can a woman do but cry?—and trust? Well, she is at rest now. But she could not die until he had promised to "bear up" not to fret, but to remember how happy they had been. They? Yes, it is even so. For she was blest in giving, and he in receiving. It was an equal partnership after all!

"She was a good wife—to me!"

O man! man!—Why not have told her so, when her ears were not dulled by death? Why wait to say these words over a coffin wherein lies a wasted, weary, gray-haired woman, whose eyes have so long held that pathetic story of loss and suffering and patient yearning which so many women's eyes reveal—to those who read. Why not have made the wilderness in her heart blossom like the rose with the prodigality of your love?
Now you would give worlds—were they yours to give—to see the tears of joy your words would have once caused, bejewelling the closed windows of her soul.
It is too late.

We have careful thoughts for the stranger
And smiles for the sometimes guest, But oft for our own
The bitter tone,
Though we love our own the best.
