'Alone in the Desert' by Mr. Kelly, was sung with splendid effect, and was loudly and deservedly applauded. The accompaniment of this song is simply grand. The singer is supposed to be lost in a vast desert, and after long suffering, and when on the verge of the grave, about to give himself up to die of hunger and thirst, he hears the very faint and hardly preceptible jingle of the camel's bells in the distance, which as it hunger and thirst, he hears the very faint and hardly preceptible jingle of the camel's beils in the distance, which as it spradually draws nearer and nearer, grows louder, mapires him with fresh hope for his life, and when at last friends draw nigh, and rescue him from the beak and talous of the vulture, that all the while is hovering over his head, he gives thanks in a joyous and sudden outburst of music, thrills his hearers, and makes the piece as interesting as it is grand."—
