Getting What One Wants

BY RUTH CAMERON.

A splendidly progressive and alert young woman was telling her friends about a summer course in architecture which she had been taking. "How I wish I had time for something like that," sighed one of her listeners. "I've always been simply crazy about landscape gardening, and last spring I thought perhaps I'd take a course in it, but I simply couldn't find the time."

Now this lover of landscape gardening is also a lover of embroidery. She was wearing at the moment a wonderful lingerie gown fairly slathered with the most exquisite and intricate embroidery. She made it herself. She has more elaborately embroidered waists, gowns, lingerie and accessories in her wardrobe than any girl I ever knew. And she does all the work herself. And yet she could not find the time to take a course of summer study which would have taken at the most twelve hours a week.

Now please understand that I am not depreciating the way in which this girl spent her time. She had a perfect right to spend it as she chose, and who shall say that she was not quite as well occupied in employing her talent for producing exquisite handiwork as she would have been acquiring a smattering of landscape gardening. But the point is this—she said she was "simply crazy" about landscape gardening. I question the sincerity of her insanity. In other words, if she really wanted to take that course as much as she thought she wanted to, she could have found the time.

"What a man wants that will be get," says Emerson, "or be changed in the trying." There is far more everyday truth in that philosophy than we realize. Genuine, wholehearted wanting of anything is a tremendous leverage. Somehow or other we are likely to find time for the things we really and truly want. And when we say that we can't possibly do this or that or the other, despite the fact that we want to with all our hearts, we are likely to be deceiving ourselves. Desire, if it is strong enough develops ability. One of the most happy-go-lucky, money careless girls I ever knew developed after her marriage into an ultra-economical housewife. With the eternal vigilance that is always the price of household economy she scrims and saves and contrives, and manages to run her house on a record sum. Nor is this wonderful change in character the result of necessity; her husband earns a generous salary. It is simply the result of her desire to have most of the money for pretty clothes.

When anyone says, "I have been longing to come and see you but I simply couldn't find the time. I've been so disappointed," I usually take the longing and the disappointment with a grain of salt.

Most people get what they want in this world, even the unselfish ones who live for others, because unless that was what they really wanted the most they wouldn't be that way.

Are the Fly and Mosquito Dangerous?

The fly, with spongy feet, collects the invisible germs of diseases, spreads them over our food and poisons us with typhoid and cholera. The mosquito with its bite injects into our veins malaria and yellow fever. The bacteria of consumption, or grip, are everywhere present for us to breathe into our lungs. The blood which flows through our veins and arteries is our protection. It should contain healthy red and white blood corpuscles—capable of warding off these disease germs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood medicine and alternative made entirely without alcohol, a pure glyceric extract of bloodroot, golden seal, Oregon grape root, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, which has enjoyed a good reputation for over forty years. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fire of the body burns brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

Another Note From Mary

On the Harbor Grace Visit of the Governor and Premier.

To Editor Telegram. Dear Sir,—We can now breathe easy, as we have our exhibition over, and the dock opened by the hands of the Governor. We were all delighted with the way things went, and as for myself I was a sort of worried all day fearing that any mention of the Premier's promises would be made. I think my letter to your paper last week had the desired effect, and kept people cool. Everything went off without a hitch—everything, except the "cheer", some person called for the Premier while at the dock, and that got hatched up somehow and would not go off. The intention was good enough coming from a friend of the Premier, but as it failed to go the feeling in Sir Edward's breast must have been one of "Save me from my friends."

I see the Daily News tells the public that the brigades and bands were at the station to meet the visitors. Oh, Mr. Editor, that is a bare-faced opposition to the straight forward facts, cut from whole cloth. Contradict this if you dare Mr. News. It was at the beach the brigades and bands went.

However, we are all glad its over.

es, but this we suppose is accounted for by the fact that we are represented by Opposition members. Mr. Editor, we assure you that we are proud of our present representatives, and although to-day, they are sitting on the Opposition benches, the time is not far distant—only one year—when we shall have the great Liberal Leader, the Right Hon. Sir Robert Bond, again at the head of affairs. Truly, it cannot come too soon to save this poor country. Unfortunately, she has sunk in the gloom of political disaster. We must not allow her to go down in disgrace. Rally around Sir Robert Bond and his party. They have been the glory of the past, and must be the hope of the future.

Yours truly, EQUITY. Grand Falls, Nov. 1, 1912.

Debt.

Of all the dark bogies that scare and keep you a-tearing your hair, and walking the floor in a sweat, of all the dire perils you know, whose pinions are reeking with woe, there's nothing so dreadful as debt. The fellow in debt never knows the meaning of peace and repose; there's always a wolf at his door; it's better on liver omelette than revel in oysters and wine, he which have been charged at the store. It's better to wear your old luds and live on a diet of spuds, for which you have paid out the mon. han dress like a duke or an earl, and sed from a platter of pearl, and always expecting a dun. Oh, debt's an old Man of the Sea, from whom it is ad to get free—he rides you in spite of your screams; he rides you when or are awake and fills you with sorrow and ache, and gallops you round your dreams. He gives you an ugly enown, and spreads it all over the own, and brings you a harvest of neers; he takes all the joy from your life, brings shame to your children wife, and splatters your cottage with pers. So keep out of debt if you can; utter clear of the creditor man—and this you can do if you try; it's better to live in a keg, and feed on an onion or egg, than eat an unsettled for pie!

Fox Harbor's Wrongs.

Editor the Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—The Postal Telegraph Office was taken from two poor widows and three little orphans, the only support they had. For what cause the public don't know, except it was to put it in a heelers room, which leaves us to-day to make a collection to bring them over the hard winter. When the people demanded their rights, Devereaux sent out a force of men. Last of all Devereaux came out to Fox Harbor to try and make us believe it was Frank Morris that did it all. But it was Mr. Devereaux, and we hold him responsible for the whole thing. We will oil Devereaux' barrel for all this in 1913.

Yours truly, SYMPATHIZER. Fox Hr., Nov. 1st, 1912.
