WHAT NEXT?

With the adjournment of the Legislature and the signing of the latest railway agreement, which was said to have taken place last evening, all the outport representatives will be released from their duties and able to tear themselves away from the soft seats occupied during the session, and hie themselves homewards, weary no doubt with their efforts of making laws for the better administration of the country's affairs, and heaving sighs of relief because of their release from the turmoil and strife of Parliament. Cabinet Ministers will breathe more freely because they have come through a critical session without meeting disaster, and some of them will shortly be taking a vacation, which will be spent amidst other scenes and in other lands. Those Ministers who are not fortunate enough to get away across the Atlantic or even to the neighboring continent, not to speak of South America, will bear the burden and heat of the day at their desks, conscientiously performing the trivial round, the common task, while their colleagues are enjoying the picturesque scenery of the Cumberland Mountains, or admiring the view of the blue Mediterranean from the terraced slopes of the Riviera. The stay-at-homes, if reports are correct, will have certain work cut out for them in organizing for a swift election campaign, when the leaders return sated with the sweets of holidaying abroad, for it is generally conceded in all circles that plans are being prepared for an appeal to the country during the month of October. All the signs are indicative of this, and with the Government in possession the advantages of springing an election are all with the Prime Minister and his party. They control the situation. They have the sinews of war at hand, and can select their own time. Therefore it is incumbent upon all opposed to the policy and regime of the party in power to take such steps as may be necessary to combat whatever designs the Government may contemplate. The Daily News emphatically asserts that it is the intention of the Government to go to the country this fall, and to again utilize the railway as an agency in their favor. Forewarned being forearmed there is but the one thing to do. "In times of peace," says an old axiom, "prepare for war." The meaning of this is clear and unmistakable. The adjournment of the House may be termed a time of peace, or to use a phrase made popular during the debates on the railway agreement, "a period of armistice." During this term the Government will be discussing plans and considering details, framing policies and arranging field movements, and with the power to set the day for an election in their keeping, that day will be when everything is perfected and the smallest factor considered and marked in. Nothing will be left to chance, in the event of an election this fall, by the Government. The Prime Minister is too shrewd a politician for that. He will take advantage of every weakness in his opponents, and wherever there is an opening in their ranks he will rush his forces toward the gap. Time then it is for those who are antagonistic to the party in office to get busy. Failure to do so may be fatal.

General Holiday.

To-morrow (Thursday) being a general holiday the Telegram will not publish.

Opening of Synod.

A large number of clerical and lay delegates have arrived in town during the past few days. There was a celebration of the Holy Communion at the Cathedral at 7.30 o'clock this morning, many of the delegates of both classes receiving.

The Veteran.

GUDEDECOURT NUMBER.
The Guedeccourt number of the "Veteran" has just made its appearance and from the front cover to the back, it is a credit to its publishers. The cover design is particularly striking, containing as it does, in a black oval, the red triangle and a verse of the song of the 29th Division, in white letters:
"Oh! This is the song of the Twenty-Ninth."
On every field you'll find it;
For wherever the red triangle went
It left its mark behind it."
As is to be expected, the epic of Guedeccourt is ably related by Major B. Butler, D.S.O., M.C., who took an active part in that heroic combat. The programme of the Memorial Day services is also included. Several interesting articles go to the make up of this entertaining number of the "Veteran."

Firemen Had Two Calls.

ONLY SMALL BLAZE.
An alarm of fire called the Central and East End Fire Companies to the residence of Ronald Hiscock, Barnes' Road, shortly before eight o'clock this morning. As only the chimney was on fire very little damage was done. Shortly before noon the firemen received another call, this time from Angel Place. The fire was in the residence of Mr. M. Egan. It was caused by the accidental igniting of a room, which was being fumigated with burning sulphur. The blaze was quenched after about 10 minutes, and very little damage was done the premises.

New Boat Club.

The C.L.B. Old Comrades have now taken over the Avalon Boat Club and all their property, including the Boat House and boats which include the Blue Peter and Red Cross. ### Dean Addresses Rotary.

DISTINGUISHED CLERIC PRAISES NEWFOUNDLAND'S BEAUTY SPOTS.

In the lengthy and inspiring address delivered by him before the St. John's Rotary Club, the Very Rev. Dean Llywd of Nova Scotia, was loud in his praise of Newfoundland's beauty spots, particularly Humber Valley. The occasion of the address was the regular weekly dinner of the Rotary Club, held last night at the Green Lantern. Rotarian C. R. Duder was the chairman of the evening and a large number of members were present.

Dean Llywd was the guest of honor, and the other guests were Rev. E. C. Barp, Dr. John Murphy, T. H. Dean of Manchester, J. P. Blackwood, Major Atkins of Liverpool, A. Wilson, Frank Bradshaw, E. Fox, H. C. Barle, and A. B. Perlin, of the Evening Telegram. Rotarian F. Musxy, of Springfield, Mass., made a short address in the course of which he urged all his fellow rotarians to work for the city in which they lived.

The chairman then introduced the speaker of the evening. Dean Llywd opened his remarks by stating that he had formerly been a Rotarian but had been prevented from remaining a member of the organization by pressure of other work. At the same time, he had never lost interest in Rotary. He termed it one of the shaping forces in the life of any community, worthy to rank side by side with all great social movements. It was his first visit to Newfoundland, said the Dean, and he would leave it with regret. He spoke warmly and enthusiastically of the beauties of the Humber River Valley, and said that it was not only a sportsman's paradise and a poet's paradise, but also, an artist's opportunity.

"Never," said the speaker, "make the mistake of allowing it to be said that Newfoundland is not equal to any other country. If you do, you will be guilty of a great blunder." You have a great island here, and you have a right to be proud of it, and I hope you are proud of it, for it is one of the objects of Rotary to make you so." Continuing, the speaker referred to the great business convention at Winnipeg which had been, in part, financed by Rotary. He said the object was more than a selfish one, it was an effort towards the progress of the whole land, viewed from the standpoint of moral worth. That action alone, justified the existence of Rotary. Ways in which the organization could help the community said Dean Llywd, were by the formation of a public library, by creating interest in art, and by keeping a high standard of business ethics. He said, "The morals of business are in your hands. It is in your power to state what are to be the standards of business dealing in the community. In doing this, you must work together, for co-operation is the keynote of success in all movements of this kind. You must think continually or be left in the rear. You must think big because the problems which face you to-day are big. Finally, you must all recollect that you are part of a big life." The Dean referred to a statement made to him that the British Empire was decadent. He resented this remark, for he believed that the Empire was still in its infancy. "This Empire of ours," he said, "was brought into existence at this juncture of history so that providence can accomplish designs of the vastest and most far reaching order. This Empire is destined to become the controlling force in the future reign of democratic life among nations." At the conclusion of his profoundly impressive address, a vote of thanks was tendered the Dean by the chairman, and was briefly responded to. During the evening, the Chairman announced that the following had been elected members of the Rotary Club, J. Cocker, Garage man; R. Murphy, Telephone; G. F. Kearney, Gent's Furnishings. The National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

On George's Banks.

AN EPIC.
Up from the East the storm clouds came,
Shrieking their warning, pelting their rain.
And the Devil's to pay, when it starts
And the gloaming heralds the coming night.
And the land's alee and thunders growl
And fierce winds echo the cry of wail.
Which dip with the seas that the storm kings hurl,
Over the ocean, over the world.

And you laugh as you sense it out of the night,
But it's George's Banks and the ship's bright.
And the spume from the rollers out there to lee,
Smacks blood in the faces of men at sea.
Though she strains at her anchors,
Her sails close furled,
She's heaving and tossing over the world.
Hal! but that gust was a stunnin' one,
But it's only the mizen topmast's gone.
The wrack—Why the gale has whisked it away.
The rest is a case of stow and belay,
But the schooner's awash, and soon may be whirled,
Down through the smother over the world.

Now the cables have parted, and out thro' the gloom,
Sped the small George's Fisher, all lotted her doom.
When the lightning's quick flash,
Shed "Old Glory" unfurled,
As she plunged to the nether depths,
Out of the world.
—T.D. CAREW.

Relief Works Closing.

The work has been completed and is now waiting for inspection before the contractors will be finally settled with. There are quite a number of smaller jobs on which men are being given relief work, and these are being shut down as the jobs are completed.

Our Local Peppy.

HIS DIARY.

June 20th.—Last night being very rainy, the water broke into my house and spoiled all my ceilings, almost. No money comes in, so that I have been forced to borrow a great deal for my expenses. To Water Street, where I meet Mr. Foote and learn from him how the Railway Agreement is now signed. A strange thing is that it has been rewritten and none know what has been added to it or how it now stands. The House did this day adjourn till the last day of October, and great talk everywhere of an election in the fall. I to dine with the Rotary Club, and sit by Mr. Morris, and did discourse with him on divers things. Dean Llywd did make a mighty good discourse, but was, I think, a bit long, and somewhat slow in his delivery.

Convict Recaptured.

CAUGHT AT WHITBOURNE—ATTEMPTED TO BURGLE STORE—WAS AT LARGE FOR TWO WEEKS.

After defying the police for over two weeks, Kitchener Edwards, the escaped convict was captured at Whitbourne early this morning. He will be brought to town by the first train offering.

The news of the capture was received this forenoon. Hearing a man moving about in his shop about 4 a.m. to-day, G. N. Sparkes, a resident of Whitbourne, jumped out of bed and proceeded to investigate. He discovered the would-be burglar prowling about in the store below, and after a short tussle, succeeded in capturing him. The burglar proved to be none other than Kitchener Edwards. How Edwards, who escaped on June 5th, contrived to evade the search parties which scoured the surrounding country for him, is yet unknown. He must have been fed and clothed by people who lived near his hiding places. He probably walked to Whitbourne by easy stages. By a peculiar coincidence the convict, who recently escaped from prison in the Isle of Wight, was caught in the same way, a cordon of police surrounding a house he attempted to burgle. On the last occasion on which an escape was made from the local penitentiary, one man was recaptured and the other got clear away.
