said that this was not a party measure. I have not asked a single Member of this side of the House how he intended to vote or what were his intentions with regard to this Bill. I think, however, there is one member whom I think I can assure the ladies is prepared to support the Bill. I canvassed the District of Bonaville three times in eighteen months, and when speaking at public meetings Captain Winsor never lost an opportunity to tell the ladies, who often attended the meetings in very large numbers, that he would be prepared to support the Bill to the last ditch. Capt. Winsor is looked upon as the ladies man of the party. So Mr. Speaker, even if I cannot speak for any other members of this side of the House I think that I can speak for Capt. Winsor because I think that he could hardly go back to the District of Bonaville and tell the women that he did not support the measure. Now when I say that it is not a party measure I do not say that it is not an important measure, because it is extremely important. In it we must be prepared to double the franchise of the people of this island. We are prepared to double up the responsibility, and that is something that no member should consider other than very carefully. He cannot look upon it as a joke. It is a serious matter and one that cannot but be well considered in this House.

I have seen where some of the members of this House said that they could not do anything without first consulting their constituency. In this case the constituents have been very well consulted. This Bill has been up since 1920 and I feel satisfied that the members of this House can well assume that their constituents are in accord. So, Mr. Speaker, I say that while it is not a party measure it is an important measure. I said in my remarks at the opening of this Assembly that there are three questions which we had to ask ourselves and the first and most important is whether we will give the franchise to women at all. Before we answer that question I think that we ought to give some little consideration to what our neighbours have done. It is not always necessary to follow the example of our neighbours, but at the same time it is always advisable to know what they have done and what has been their experience and what has been the result of their actions. We find on going over the records that New South Wales, a colony of Australia, granted the Municipal Franchise to the women in 1897 or 58 years ago. The first country that granted the full franchise was New Zealand in 1893, or thirty-two years ago. The colonies of Australia formed themselves into a Commonwealth in 1901, and at the very next session of the legislature they voted a full measure of franchise to the women. In Canada we find that the first franchise was given to the women in 1917. That was when Sir Robert Borden went to the country on the question of conscription and a Bill was passed to permit the widows, wives, mothers and daughters of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces to vote at that election. In 1918, the next year, the Canadians got the full measure of the franchise at the age of twenty-one for women. Now let us turn to the Old Country and see what they have done. The lawlessness of the suffragettes is a very well known historic feature in England. They mobbed the Cabinet ministers, chained themselves on the railing of Downing Street, they went on hunger strikes and had to be forcibly fed, they assaulted public houses, they tore down monuments such as St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey, the British Museum and the National Gallery. The House of Commons had to have the doors guarded against the entrance of women. I feel that there are many in this room who think that this action on the part of the women did not advance their interests at all. I feel sure that most reasonable women will admit that while the suffering of the women is very admirable in as much as it was very courageous, at the same time we cannot but think that it did not do anything to advance the matter in the opinion of that time. While this widening movement on part of the suffragettes was going on in 1919 a further provision was made to give the women the right to sit on juries. I may say that in connection with that matter a cousin of mine, a sister of Hon. Mr. Alderdice, of the Colonial Gorge Company, is Justice of the Peace in the North of Ireland and I am satisfied that she is able to do the duties of the office as well as any man who ever held the position. The first woman to be elected to the British House of Parliament was strangely enough an enemy of Great Britain and an alien. She was the Countess Markievicz and was the first to be elected to the British House of Commons. The Irish Sinn Féiners refused to sit in the House of Parliament to which they had been elected, so that Lady Astor was the first woman to sit in the British House of Commons. In 1928 there were eleven women elected to the House of Commons in Britain. In 1924 the number was reduced to three. So then it does not seem that women are going to take possession of the House at the present time. That is the history of what the Mother Country has done up to the present time. The American Ministers of New Zealand and Australia were over in England a short time ago and they were asked what their experience was and they both said that it was a great success and that they would not repeat the Act unless to which they had been elected. The Continent the suffrage has been given and things have been appreciably improved there. We find ourselves, together with South Africa, the only English-speaking country in the world which has not given the franchise to the women. South Africa is largely populated by the Boers who are not English speaking and therefore we are the only English speaking people who have not given the franchise, and it is hardly British fair to play to treat this matter in this way.

And I want to ask you to-day why we are in this position and why we have not given the vote to women. Surely our women did as much during the war as the women of any other country. I say, Mr. Speaker, that after considering whether we shall give the vote to women or not, the balance so far seems to be in their favour. The next question that the House will have to consider is the manner in which we shall give the vote to women. In England the franchise is given at the age of thirty. At this session of the British House a motion was filed asking that the age be reduced so as to give the franchise to the women at the same age as the men, that is twenty-one. But it was found that if the women got the vote at twenty-one there would be two million more women to vote than men and as they were swamped the votes of the men they were not given it. Now we ask ourselves at what age we should give it to the women. Canada they have made it twenty-one. I think that in England a large number of them are not vote. A large number of them are very indifferent about it and I think that one might be inclined to imagine that a great many young maidens just passed thirty would be a little difficult about going to a public booth. However that may be I am inclined to believe that the age to give it would be twenty-five.

I don't concede at all that the woman is not as well qualified to vote as twenty-one as the man is, but I have my doubts as to whether the vote ought to have been given to the men at twenty-one. At the same time I think, if the votes were given to the women at the age of twenty-five it would meet the point. The next question is what privileges we are to extend to the women under the vote? And this Bill gives permission to the women to sit in the House of Assembly exactly on the same terms as the men do, and their privileges are exactly the same. The Bill calls for a woman sitting in the House of Assembly to have an income of four hundred and eighty dollars, or she must be the owner of property to the value of twenty-five hundred dollars. Of course, I don't say that the women are going to make a desperate effort to get into the House of Assembly, but if they are given the vote I submit that they should be given the right to get the proper people to represent them.

Mr. Speaker, I shall be making more remarks on this subject when it goes into Committee. I only wish to introduce this Bill this afternoon, but I want to sum up my few remarks now by saying that all arguments go to show that the women of Newfoundland are merely looking for their just rights, and the question we have to ask ourselves in this House this afternoon is: Are we going to give to their very reasonable requests? Are we going to give the women what they are asking for? Or are we going to make the public pronouncement that, in the opinion of the majority of this House, the women of this country are less deserving, the intelligence of the women of this country is less developed and the judgment of the women of this country is less to be depended upon than that of the women of any other part of the English-speaking world?

I have much pleasure, Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading of the Bill.

The Minister of Justice seconded the motion said he was always a supporter of equal rights. He took the position that when a woman asked for the vote he had no right to refuse. It was a question of principle and not of politics whether a woman had the right to vote or not. His experience has been that from the standpoint of discernment the maturation of judgment of women was more balanced than that of men. Women had a different status now than they had twenty years ago, having become in the meantime more independent they are to be found filling all sorts of positions. He admitted that women should be excluded from public life, owing to the effect on her temperament. In concluding he expressed himself as having no fear as to the result and that women would be their right quite as intelligently as men do.

Mr. Warren stated that his Party was going to vote for Woman Suffrage. He pointed out that although the Prime Minister disclaimed any idea of making it a party measure he gave to the opening campaign a party line in speaking of the history of the Bill. Mr. Warren pointed out that it was always understood that the Bill would be a party measure and when he presented a petition signed by 7,500 women he stated he was not committing himself to support Woman Suffrage. He did not think that the Prime Minister was altogether fair in saying that the ladies were not in the least in the way of the Bill was not proceeded with. Mr. Warren thought that all the members of the House should support the Bill. He believed that by giving of votes to women coupled with the redistribution bill not only a lasting but beneficial effect on the future elections in the country will be felt. Before closing Mr. Warren intimated that he would probably move for the Amendment in the past was one of our country's right to vote long ago. He congratulated the women who carried on the fight during the past three years and assured them of success.

MR. HIBBS expressed his belief in the principle of women having a say in the government of their country. He favoured the bill and would support it to the best of his ability. He felt that no member of the present House was responsible for the previous shelving of the bill.

MR. H. B. C. LAKE had discussed the matter of the franchise with many people in the district of Fortune, and the ladies there advised him that if a bill came before the House he should support it. He was pleased that it was introduced not as a party measure and would give it his support.

MR. G. GRIMES stated that he had always supported the women's franchise movement. It was only fair that the measure should have the unanimous support of the whole House.

The bill was given a second reading.

earning power of its young women.

The present administration, he continued, stand for a square deal to all, and that included the women. So he hoped that the Bill would pass the House unanimously.

MR. P. MOORE thought that as it was an evening for reading it was an opportune time to place himself on record as favouring Women's franchise. He was canvassed by one lady who was present to vote for the bill, and by others to oppose it. He was glad of the opportunity to give the measure his hearty support.

MR. W. J. BROWN said he had been interested in the Franchise question for a number of years. The many features of woman's work had greatly impressed him. He had no doubt of their right to vote, and the argument that it would take women out of their proper sphere—the home—needed no answer. He pointed out that government is for the people, and women are part of the people, and in all countries where civilization has advanced the power of government is in the hands of the people. He felt sure that the male voters of the West End of St. John's would welcome the women.

THE MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES, supporting the motion, stated he was one of the first candidates to promise the women of Bonaville to support a Woman's Franchise Bill. He felt that women were as competent to vote as 30 per cent. of the men. Capt. Winsor like the preceding speakers was heartily applauded.

MR. HALFYARD stated that he was voting for the bill although it might have been construed by some that his attitude in the past was one of indifference. As regards the actions of past administrations he thought they had no bearing on the matter at the present time.

MR. J. C. PUDDISTER said the bill would have his hearty support. He declared he was not the victim of any propaganda. He always believed that women should have the vote and he never changed that opinion. It was her right, whether she won that right by the war or not. It was woman's inherent right to be able to say who shall govern her country.

HON. M. S. SULLIVAN stated that he had pledged his support to the bill three weeks ago. He believed that the measure would pass by the unanimous support of the House. He was sorry that the women were not given the right to vote long ago. He congratulated the women who carried on the fight during the past three years and assured them of success.

MR. HIBBS expressed his belief in the principle of women having a say in the government of their country. He favoured the bill and would support it to the best of his ability. He felt that no member of the present House was responsible for the previous shelving of the bill.

The bill was given a second reading.

ing, after which the Prime Minister moved the adjournment of the House until 3 p.m. to-day.

Adorable "Flapper"

CLEVER ARTISTS MAKE BIG HIT IN CASINO LAST NIGHT.

Those who respond to genuine entertainment in the form of thrills and laughs, will have a great time at the Casino when they see "The Flapper" as played by Arle Marks and her associates. "The Flapper" is a bill that is chock full of all the elements a St. John's theatre-goer desires when he goes shopping for entertainment.

Miss Arle Marks as Kitty Burns did ample justice to the role. Her performance was delightful, containing lots of real humor and deft touches of characterization. Lindsay E. Perrin in the role of Phil Edwards puts over a lot real comedy which causes roars of laughter from the audience. Mr. Perrin is a different type of comedian than we have been used to seeing, and we may venture a little further by saying better type of comedian.
