LEGAL DECISIONS IN WESTERN CASES

One in the Supreme Court and the Other in the High Court of Ontario.

The first case taken up by the supreme court at Ottawa on Monday was that of the Lake Erie and Detroit River Railway Co. vs. Scott, an appeal from the court of appeal for Ontario. The plaintiff respondent was a brakeman on the railway, and sues for damages for injuries received while on duty, caused, as he claims, by negligence of the other servants of the company in checking too suddenly the part of the train he was on when it was detached from the the railway applied for non-suit. The trial judge at first refused, stating that he thought no case was made out for plaintiff, but he did not think he should stop the case. However, on counse pressing for a ruling and undertaking all responsibility, a non-suit was or dered. The non-suit was set aside by the divisional court, whose judgment was affirmed by the court of appeal Judgment was reserved, the judges in timeting that they were agreed that the appeal should be dismissed, but would render formal judgment to that effect.
At Toronto on Monday, before Chief Justice Meredith and Falconbridge, the suit of Anderson vs. Anderson was reviewed. Judgment (H.) on appeal by plaintiffs, E. L. and D.
