

PETER, A HORSE, PINNED THE THIEF

Owner Drove After a Fleeing Robber, Who Doubled and Redoubled in His Course.

New York, Dec. 1.—Dr. Peter Hughes' bay horse, Peter H., 2:17½, nobly did his part in catching Charles Curtis, 22 years old, a fleeing burglar, in Williamsburg, yesterday. Dr. Hughes, surgeon-in-chief of St. Catherine's Hospital, did the rest. After a long chase, in which Curtis doubled and redoubled in his tracks, Peter H. pinned Curtis against a fence and Dr. Peter Hughes captured him.

Mrs. Mortimer D. Metcalf returned to her home on the third floor of the big apartment house, No. 574 Bedford avenue, at 3:30 p.m. On the second floor she met Curtis coming from Dr. A. C. Vossler's apartment. Mrs. Metcalf knew Mrs. Vossler was not at home, and she asked Curtis what he was doing there. For answer he knocked her down and ran.

Mrs. Metcalf ran upstairs to her apartment, threw open a front window and shouted. Police. This Dr. Hughes, who lives at No. 467 Bedford avenue, was driving Peter H. to the Parkway Driving Club, on the Ocean Boulevard. He and a colored servant were in a runabout.

Dr. Hughes heard Mrs. Metcalf's shouts, saw Curtis run from the apartment house and clucking to Peter H. went after him. Curtis turned into Rodney street, so did Peter H. and Dr. Peter H. Seeing that he was pursued, Curtis in the middle of the long block to Wythe avenue, threw off his overcoat and coat. At Wythe avenue, he cunningly turned and ran towards Bedford avenue. That forced Dr. Hughes to pull up Peter H., to turn him around and set after Curtis again.

Dr. Hughes became so engrossed in the chase that he did not ask anyone to stop Curtis, and persons who saw the pursuit must have thought the men were playing some sort of athletic game, for no one raised a finger to stop Curtis, who ran back to Wythe avenue, then along the avenue three blocks to Heves street, and into a saloon on that corner.

Dr. Hughes pulled up and sent his servant into the saloon. Curtis, well winded, ran out a rear door and up Hewes street, with the relentless Peter H. and his driver after him. Curtis scattered pieces of jewelry and silver forks and knives as he ran. Finally on Bedford avenue, between Penn and Rutledge streets, he turned again. Dr. Hughes lightly touched Peter H. with the whip, drove him up on the sidewalk and made as if to drive right over Curtis, who, exhausted, was staggering. Instead, the doctor, a fine whip, so guided Peter H. that the horse crushed Curtis against an iron fence. When the breath was about squeezed out of Curtis, the doctor turned Peter H. out, grabbed Curtis' collar and drove into the street, yanking Curtis with him.

"Get in here," Dr. Hughes ordered. Curtis obeyed. Soon he drew two diamond rings and a gold watch from his pocket.

"Take these and let me go," he panted. "Get up," said the doctor to Peter H. He drove to No. 574 Bedford avenue.

"That's the man who knocked me down," said Mrs. Metcalf. "Besides, he robbed my apartment."

Dr. Hughes turned Curtis over to a policeman. At the Clymer street police station the young burglar said he lived at No. 101 Bergen street, Brooklyn. He will be in the Lee avenue police court this morning. He stole $700 worth of jewelry and silverware from Mrs. Metcalf and $400 from Dr. Vossler. Some of the valuables are on the Williamsburg streets yet.

THREE FIREMEN KILLED

Fatal and Costly Collision on the Delaware and Hudson Road.

Oneonta, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Three men were killed, several others had remarkably narrow escapes from death, and property valued at fully $40,000 was destroyed in a collision between two freight trains on the Susquehanna division of the Delaware and Hudson Railroad near here today.

The dead men were all firemen. They were: F. A. Martin, Copperstown; Frank Pratt, Oneonta; George Williams, Worcester.

The collision occurred one mile west of Worcester. The fast freight train known as No. 77 westbound was running at the rate of 40 miles an hour when it crashed into an extra freight, which was being shunted off to a side track. The engine of the fast freight was smashed. Cars were crumpled up and thrown from the tracks and three firemen caught in the crash were literally ground to pieces. The engineers and the other trainmen saved themselves by jumping just before the crash.

Lever's T-Z (Wise Head) Disinfectant Soap Powder is a boon to any home. It disinfects and cleans at the same time.

Who was it who said that the man who looked down the barrel of a loaded gun, and he who fails to keep his bin filled with good, clean, hot coal during these pneumonia-breeding days, are first cousins?

The more "WALLA-WALLA" the coal bins of London hold, the less the doctors' bills will be this winter. "WALLA-WALLA"—the coal for the cold, and the cook-means comfort, because it makes more warmth with less work—and it means better health, a better disposition, and a better home for the same reason.

And you get it for no more than you'll pay for other coals.

THE CAREER OF MME. JANAUSCHEK

Famous Tragedienne for Thirty Years Was Reigning Favorite of Playgoers.

New York, Dec. 1.—Mme. Janauschké, the famous actress, died in the Brunswick Home at Amityville, L. I., on Monday night, where she had been failing rapidly for several months. Janauschké was one of the great women of the stage. For more than thirty years she held a position unrivaled by any other woman excepting, perhaps, Charlotte Cushman. In her place in the affections of the public long after disease had affected her mind and body.

To enumerate the list of characters she had played would be to give almost two-thirds of the leading female parts in Shakespeare.

Among the many plays other than Shakespeare's in which she took a leading part were: "What Dreams May Come," "The Song of Xibulgen," "Adrienne," "Don Carlos," and "Edmont." In "Bleak House" she achieved great fame. As Lady Dedlock she appeared in every city in the English-speaking world.

When poverty drove her to promiscuous engagements she brought her great genius to bear in unimportant roles, and the last she ever played was that of an adventuress in a melodrama "The Great Diamond Robbery." The work of Mme. Janauschké was its redeeming feature.

In 1899 she was stricken with paralysis while living in Brooklyn and incapacitated from caring for herself. The last time she went out alone was on July 18, 1900. On returning from shopping that day she was again stricken.

At the time of her affliction Janauschké was the tenant of a grocer, Jas. P. Tossini, in Brooklyn. She was without money, but had many treasures, including gowns given her by kings and celebrated people; gowns celebrated for their association with her famous parts and articles of virtue.

Mr. Tossini refused to permit her to part with these, sent her to a hospital, and later to Saratoga. But she suffered another stroke. She rallied sufficiently to be sent back to Brooklyn and to the Brunswick Home.

At her command her collection of treasures was sold a year ago to pay her debts and provide for her care. Mme. Janauschké was 75 years old. Her full name was Francesca Magdalena Janauschké. She was born at Prague, Bohemia. Her parents were humble working people. It was while studying voice culture that her wonderful powers of expression attracted attention.

For a time she was in the theatrical company maintained by the Duke of Meiningen. She first commanded recognition by her portrayal of the title part in Sophocles' "Antigone." She soon became one of the leading actresses in Europe.

In 1854 she married the Baron Frederick P. Pillot, who first brought her to the United States. She appeared only in German roles, but her success was instantaneous. Her husband afterward deserted and left her penniless, and died in obscurity.

The brave woman then started the battle anew. She learned English and repeated her earlier successes. She made many fortunes, but through mismanagement and bad investments lost all.

TO EUROPE IN 30 HOURS

Naval Officer Promises Sensation in His New Airship.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—D. Gold, a retired naval officer, living at 5407 Girard avenue, says that next spring the world's mode of travel will be revolutionized by the appearance of the Gold new explosive airship, with a speed of 100 miles an hour and its propellers turning 2,000 revolutions a minute. Europe in 30 hours, Chicago in ten, says Mr. Gold.

He has had a model built, but will wait till winter is over to go up in it. All he needs to spring the airship on the world is the confidence of a few millionaires.

"I have served seventeen years in the navy and have studied the wind," said Gold today. "The wind shakes the airship must be stiff and rigid. The fastest birds, do not exceed 100 miles a minute. My propellers will revolve 3,000 times. I can sail away from anything except greased lightning."

"In the place of the usual silk bag will be one of aluminum. Every part of the airship must be stiff and rigid. The ship will be 100 feet long and 30 feet in breadth. It will provide accommodation for a motorman, a sky pilot and six passengers, with refreshments."

HOW COXEY GOT CREDIT

Connection With a Paying Company Enabled Him to Speculate.

Columbus, Dec. 1.—Jacob Schuler Coxe, who led the commonwealth army to a victory in 1894, and in 1895 received 52,000 votes as the Populist candidate for Governor of Ohio, professes to be a bankrupt, with debts aggregating $28,741.99, and has filed a petition in the federal court here asking discharge from these obligations. Those who knew of "General" Coxe only as a political dreamer and dramatic sensationalist will wonder how he obtained credit for so large a sum, but the fact is that he has always been a fairly good enterprise pusher, and even when leading the army of hoboes ten years ago had business schemes at work that turned out well—stone quarries at Massillon and sand, steel and silica works at Mount Vernon. These properties were eventually turned over to the Coxe Steel and Silica Sand Company, of Mount Vernon. The petition affects him only as an individual. His connection as organizer and supposedly large owner of the company probably gave him credit, which he used in other ventures that were not successful. He procured $50,000 from the Union National Bank, of Massillon; $30,000 from the Hussey National Bank, of Painesville; $100,000 from the Dime Savings Bank of Mount Vernon, and $12,500 from the Israel estate, of Mount Vernon.

Of the total debts $197,410 are said to be secured, probably with stock of the Coxe Steel and Silica Sand Company. The balance is said to be good property and worth $400,000.

DOMINION'S MEN IN FAR NORTH

Some of the Hardships Encountered by the Mounted Police.

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—Some idea of the extraordinary hardships which the gallant members of the Mounted Police have to encounter in making their patrols and carrying on police supervision in the country bordering the Arctic Sea can be gleaned from a report recently received at the mounted police department from Sgt. Fitzgerald. That officer is in charge of the police patrol at Herschel Island, near the mouth of the Mackenzie River.

Up to the date of his report, which was Aug. 20 last, ten whalers had called at the island on their way to the eastward, and these paid duty on such supplies as they had to trade. On the evening of July 29 Sgt. Fitzgerald and Constables Sutherland and Kenneth Stewart, accompanied by two Indian boys in a canoe, left Fort McPherson near the junction of the Peel and Mackenzie Rivers for the purpose of making a patrol to Herschel Island.

By the evening of the 31st, in the teeth of rough weather, they had accomplished 23 miles, but were then obliged to cache the small canoe and take the Indian boys into their boat. On Aug. 1 and 2 the party had to lay out, owing to rain and head winds, and on Aug. 3 only made twelve miles. On Aug. 4, 5 and 6 the journey was resumed and a distance of 30 miles paddled. On Aug. 7 and 8 they had to again lay out, owing to heavy rains.

On the morning of Aug. 9 they sailed several hours and in the afternoon arrived at the mouth of the Mackenzie River.

Sergeant Fitzgerald's narrative continues: "The wind having done down a little, we left the mouth of the Mackenzie at 2:30, thinking we could sail close to the shore along the coast. After we got started I found that it was getting very shoal, and I could not turn back or make for the shore, and had to run the canoe out to sea for over three miles. We fought the windward waves until 7 p.m. before we could make a landing—which we did at Big River Sound at that time, about 20 miles from the river. It took one man being all the time, and four of us with paddles and the aid of the sail to keep the canoe from swamping or going to pieces. If the canoe once struck she would go to pieces in a few minutes. I would not have ventured it with the canoe if I had known we had to go so far from shore. At Big River Sound there were about 20 Eskimos encamped, and they had three whaleboats with them. I hired one of the natives to take the party to Herschel Island."

Sgt. Fitzgerald and party had to sail for the remainder of the journey through the ice, but succeeded in reaching Herschel Island on the afternoon of the 12th, the patrol having occupied a fortnight. Sgt. Fitzgerald intends to winter at Herschel Island, keeping Constable Sutherland with him. He has rented a small hut and storehouse, and if possible will get another hut to use as a guardroom.

INDIANS TORTURE MINERS

Remove Victims' Soles and Walk Them Across Cacti.

Magdalena, Sonora, Mexico, Dec. 2.—Reports from reliable sources reached here tonight of the killing several days ago of two American miners on one of the roads leading to the mines north of Hermosillo.

It seems that the Americans, father and son, named Soudakin and Soudakin, of Grand Junction, Colo., with loaded teams of camp supplies, had reached their camp, when they were attacked by Yaqui Indians.

The men evidently put up a stiff fight, for when found the soles of their feet had been removed and they had been forced to walk on a bed of prickly cactus and then murdered. When found their bodies were in a terrible state of mutilation, and their supplies and stock had been driven away.

This report is verified by the Jendomaris fiscal, and also by J. Herring, a soldier who had complained to the authorities that the Yaquis had robbed him. As it is impossible to have supplies hauled in by Mexicans, who fear being killed by the Yaquis, while the friendly Indians fear to work, the soldiers will capture them and cause their deportation.

At Torres Station, Herring says, the Yaquis disemboweled a friendly Pima, and had to run the canoe out to sea for over three miles. We fought the windward waves until 7 p.m. before we could make a landing—which we did at Big River Sound at that time, about 20 miles from the river. It took one man being all the time, and four of us with paddles and the aid of the sail to keep the canoe from swamping or going to pieces. If the canoe once struck she would go to pieces in a few minutes. I would not have ventured it with the canoe if I had known we had to go so far from shore. At Big River Sound there were about 20 Eskimos encamped, and they had three whaleboats with them. I hired one of the natives to take the party to Herschel Island."

CZAR RELEASES FAMOUS NIHILISTS

Freed From Prison, But Will Be Banished to Arctic Russia.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 1.—In addition to Vera Figner, two famous nihilists, leaders of the terrorist movement from 1878 to 1884, were released from the fortress of Peter Paul, after 20 years' solitary confinement.

They are Col. Aschenbrener and Vera Figner, or Vera Filipova, as she was then called, was a beautiful woman of 27 when she was sent to the fortress. For six years she had been the mainspring of every nihilist movement, and her loveliness and wealth made her one of the greatest of revolutionary powers.

She converted half the troops of the Caucasus to the nihilist side, and Col. Aschenbrener, then commanding a South Russian regiment, was one of the most powerful of her disciples.

Together with five other officers Col. Aschenbrener, inspired by Vera Figner, had plotted a revolution to which the whole of the troops were committed.

At the very moment of fruition the plot was betrayed by a renegade nihilist named Degaleff.

Degaleff, high in the council of the terrorists, had been arrested, and, put under torture, turned informer, and became the head man in Col. Soudakin's secret police.

Then the nihilists seized him, tried him, and sentenced him to death. The price of his life was the assassination of Col. Soudakin, and Degaleff paid it.

In the meantime, Aschenbrener, Vera Figner, Ivanoff and eleven others had been betrayed. Vera and six officers were sentenced to death, and until today it was believed that penalty had been carried out.

The Government, however, followed the precedent of 1872, when Nechayeff, the "Father of Russian Terrorism," was also sentenced to death or Siberia, but was confined instead in the "travelling of Alexis"—the most secret part of the fortress of Peter Paul—in the hope that nihilist secrets might be wrested from him.

Vera Figner is now a bent, white-haired old woman; Ivanoff is little better than an imbecile, and Col. Aschenbrener is dumb.

30,000 GUARD STATUE

Carried to Manila on Gorgeous Barge With a Remarkable Escort.

Manila, Dec. 1.—The statue of the Virgin of Antipolo began its voyage to Manila today. Thirty thousand natives from many villages accompanied the gorgeous barge on which the statue was carried, marching along the river banks while hundreds followed in launches and boats and acted as an escort as far as the Pasig church, where the statue will remain for the night.

All the inhabitants of the town will remain awake all night guarding the statue and singing and praying. It is probable that 30,000 people will participate in the procession tomorrow when the virgin is enshrined in the Cathedral here. The statue will remain there for ten days during the progress of a mission which is to be conducted by Jesuit fathers.

A Spanish Captain-General brought the statue of the virgin from Acapulco in 1626, and she was adopted as the patroness of mariners.
