the assurance that the city will now put on a rapid and more frequent service its land values are bound to accordingly increase, for it is confidently anticipated that the population will be doubled at the end of this year. The ratio of increase both in freight and pedestrian traffic on the ferry is shown by the fact that in 1906 the ferry only earned $303 profit, while in 1907 the profit was $17,500 for eleven months. If the town grew to this extent last summer what will it do during the coming season? The answer is found in the sale of so much abelian to the city will now put to he present time. The prospects for a successful exhibition have far surpassed the most sanguine expectations.
