Mr. Charlton led off with a three hours' speech, and was followed by Prof. Foster, whose clear and able speech made quite an impression on the house, but it seems to be altogether unnecessary to waste time in discussing year after year the question of protection. The national policy has undoubtedly done the national policy has undoubtedly done the country good, and as the people have voted a figure as will be remunerative. by a large majority to continue it for another five years, it is about time to let the question drop. Most members think, however, they were sent here to air their views on this question and talk they will.

Mr. King of New Brunswick spoke after Prof. Foster, being succeeded by Mr. Jamieson, who wound up at 11.30, when the house adjourned, Mr. Wigle having the floor. Hardly more than one-third the seats were occupied during the night

Extra sentinels have been posted at Windston and remanded for a week. The charge placed against his name is having in his possession explosive compounds and materials in violation of the law. Evidence was given showing the detectives followed Norman from Whitehead's house to London. He took a box from Whitehead's. Among the material seized here were eight gallons of a mysterious liquid in tins, some sulphuric acid and nitro-glycerine. The prisoner assumed an air of indifference and refused to parley with the officers of the court or answer questions.

There is renewed excitement in government circles this afternoon over a report that the sentinel guarding the magazine of the government infantry parracks at New ry, Ireland, last night challenged a man discovered scaling a wall. The sentry fired and gave an alarm. Search for the intruder was fruitless. The guard was doubled and orders issued to take every caution to prevent a surprise.
