Shipbuilding in New Brunswick.

This important branch of industry is at a low ebb just now. The Journal of St. John, in referring to the subject, says:—There were in September, 1865, 18 vessels in progress of construction in this port of 15,650 tons; 9 vessels in the North Shore of 5742 tons; and 10 vessels in other ports of 4,500 tons; total in September, 1805, 25,892 tons and 37 ships. In September, 1896, there were 18 vessels building in this port of 18,330 tons; and 12 vessels in North Shore and other ports—total in September, 1866, 18,400 tons and 30 vessels. But as nearly as we can estimate, over 7,000 of the tonnage of 1865 is included. It is understood that the vessels now built at the North Shore are of a greatly improved character as compared with those of 1865. Although there are so many vessels on the stocks, operations upon many of them are at a stand-still.
