

to get there from the eastern mills and from Europe than it does to buy them in New York, where the commission merchant delivers them free of charge at his door. But he could charge the retailer enough to make up for the freight, and then the retailer could, if not the victim of freight discriminations, even upon reduced freights, because of a shorter haul. The buyers of the present western houses are as shrewd as our own, and they are bringing our houses up into close competition with the New York jobbers. To protect themselves the New York houses may have to act on the aggressive and meet the western men on their own ground. — The Commercial Bulletin.
