

we do not need to rush the Round; the intellectual basis for a big result is not there yet and there is time to think things through.

As it is, the current situation is perhaps best summarized by a comment made by one observer: It is a curious experiment that we are undertaking in the Doha Round: seeking an ambitious outcome without the customary leadership and apparently without clear vision!