"In every human undertaking we reach a point which we may call a No Retreat Peint, beyond which it is impossible to withdraw. This is characteristic of our moral impulses for good or for evil, bearing us on in swift current of action to the inevitable finish. It is the law of military tactics, it is the instinct of commercial enterprise, it confronts us as a fact in this present undertaking. Let it be affirmed, with the whole strength at my command, that we have reached this "No Retreat Point" in this great undertaking—the completion of this Cathedral, which is before us at this hour."—The Bishop of Toronto.
