

TO THE READER.

THE writer is indebted for assistance to many literary people whose thoughts have oft refreshed him. He would gladly make acknowledgment if possible, but, having disposed of his library years ago, and being too weak for study, quoting almost entirely from memory, is unable to do more than to ask those who recognize their own literary thought to accept his thanks.

WILLIAM S. COCHRANE.

Ridgetown, Ont.