

repugnant to the plain words of Scripture, overthrow the nature of a Sacrament, and hath given occasion many superstitions."

It is an issue which is forced upon us by men satisfied with Reformation principles, and the script formularies of our Church, but who long for the mediae practices and materialistic teaching from which Reformers so happily set us free in our incompara services. When Cranmer, and our English Reform gave us our Communion Service, revised, altered, tra posed, they placed in our hands the most primitive a scriptural of all services, entirely freed from that v accumulation of error which had grown up in dark a corrupt ages. It is our unspeakable privilege to posses it, and now it becomes our clear duty to defend it again all adversaries either within or without the Church.
Here we take our stand ; we can do no otherwise. Go help us. Amen.
