THE OBSTRUCTION POLICY.

To those unacquainted with the railway situation in Canada, the agitation that has been carried on with regard to the building of the Crow's Nest Southern Railway must appear mysterious. China has long been known to the outside world chiefly by its antagonism toward the building of railways, the establishment of factories and all modern productive enterprises. But in this Dominion, where the advantages of railway activity, of mining, manufacturing, commerce and all useful enterprise are fully appreciated, the opposition that has developed toward the construction of some fifty miles of railway is completely out of harmony with public opinion.

It is not that there is anything to be feared from the Crow's Nest Southern Railway, but that there is a line of four miles to be built, which, if completed, would be a serious obstacle to the building of the Crow's Nest Southern Railway.

The Crow's Nest Southern Railway is a line of four miles to be built, which, if completed, would be a serious obstacle to the building of the Crow's Nest Southern Railway.
