THURSDAY MORNING

Miss Marion MacLean's address to the Women's Canadian. Club yesterday on "The New Social Spirit," at the Margaret Eaton Temple, was much above the average address given by masculine speakers to the men's club. Miss MacLean hails from the maritime provinces, but is now of the scciological_department in Adelphi Col-lege, Brooklyn. Without any superflutige, Brooklyn. Without any superflu-cus preliminaries, and speaking en-tirely without notes, she plunged in a business-like way into her subject. The hall was crowded and the audience highly appreciative. The new social spirit, she said, was but a rehabitation of the old. It had been said that we were all members one of another, and they knew that, but had gone on ignoring it. The new spirit was merely a recognition of the fact.

tion of Comte's efforts to this end, she quoted Dr. Small of Chicago, whose classification of human wants showed that man had within himself the forces that would spur him on to activity. Recognizing the desire for social well being, she required the opportunity for each to earn his living, and to give forth to society the best that was in him. The social instinct had to be gratified. There must be a further extension of education, every normal de-sire for knowledge should be satisfied.
