SEEKING A CINDERELLA.
Uniontown (Pa.) Sunday School Offers Prize for Smallest Feet.

Uniontown, Pa., July 19.—In order to settle a long-standing argument among members of the Third Presbyterian Sunday School a "Cinderella contest" will be staged next Friday. A picnic to be held in Shady Grove Park. To the woman having the smallest feet a valuable prize will be given, and to the man who has the largest feet will also go a trophy.

Women will do the measuring in the women's competition, because, according to the chairman of the committee, "when a woman judges a woman, or anything about her, you will get the exact facts about that particular female." On the committee that will measure the men's feet are three robust men, two to hold the contestants and another to take the measurements. The chairman of the committee admits that he approaches the contest "with trepidation akin to fear."

BANDITS USE MORPHINE.
Attempt to "Dope" Kansas City Clerk Before Robbing Store.

Kansas City, Mo., July 19.—Soon after ten o'clock on Monday two bandits having the appearance of drug addicts attempted to render it to Tucker, a clerk in the Feltman & Curme shoe store, helpless by "shoot-line" morphine into his arm. When the needle broke, the bandits rushed to the register, obtained $500 and escaped.

Mr. Tucker was cut severely on the arm by the bandits when, on his failure to roll up his sleeve at their command, the bandits slashed the needle five times into his arm.

About thirty children of the British street Protestant orphanage were given a very enjoyable outing yesterday afternoon by two of the lady members of the directorate. Tired Mother Kills Herself and Babies

Husband Out of Work, Debts Piling Up, She Gives Up Long Struggle—Asphyxiates 2 Daughters, Then Cuts Her Own Throat.

New York, July 19.—There was little money in the house. There was less food. The head of the family had been out of work for months and the prospects of employment seemed remote. Debts piled up. Each day was a struggle and wore down a little more resistance. Each day seemed harder to bear. Such were the thoughts in the mind of Josephine Annetta Driggs, 16,709 108th Avenue, Jamaica, and she was too weary to carry the load. She took her two small daughters into a bedroom and turned on the gas. Then she cut her throat with a razor. When her husband returned in the late afternoon he found them dead.

The husband, Maurine P. Driggs, is an accountant. He left his last position on Jan. 1 of this year. Since then he has been unable to find work. He has tried every day after day, he declared, he has trudged the streets from one office to another, hoping to find an opening that he could fill, but he seemed doomed to failure. There appeared no place available to him, and as time went on the family resources dwindled. And besides his wife to care for there was little Grace Theresa, 3 years old, and the seven-month-old baby, Marie Antoinette.

Until about a month ago he and his family had lived with his sister, Johanna Driggs, at 8908 118th Street, Richmond Hill. Then they moved to Jamaica and still the family's circumstances did not improve.

More Than Wife Could Stand.

Driggs said that in the meantime bills piled up which he could not meet and his debts became heavy. It was more than his wife's nervous system could bear, he said, and on a number of occasions she had been unable to hide her despondency. This had happened more often in recent weeks. He had tried to cheer her up with his hopes for work. When he left the house he said, she did not appear in unusually bad spirits and he had no intimation that she might be harboring any thought of suicide or of harm to the children.

He departed as usual to make his rounds in search of a position, and as usual found that it was in vain. But he had no idea that his two little girls in spite of his ill-luck he would not find some cheer at his own hearthstone.

The children did not meet him, but he had no thought of anything wrong. As he passed through the front door he caught the odor of gas, so he made haste toward the kitchen to learn the trouble.

He found his wife's body stretched on the floor between the kitchen and the bedroom. Terrified at the sight and fighting against a dawning dread, he stumbled across the threshold into the bedroom.

There he learned the source of the gas that permeated the house. The bedroom was stifling. He drew the curtains and threw open the windows. As he drew a breath of fresh air, he saw the girls lying on a bed.

His cries for help brought neighbors and together they carried the two children out of doors and to a small grass plot. While some hurried to the hospital, the police called an ambulance from the Mary Immaculate Hospital. Dr. Gondos continued the efforts to resuscitate the girls, but after a time said that it was useless to do more. He said that both children and the mother had been dead for about two hours.

Immediately the police learned of the tragedy a reward was made to headquarters in Manhattan. Chief Inspector Cornelius F. Cahillane and members of the homicide squad hurried to the scene. Their investigation satisfied them that Mrs. Driggs alone was responsible for the deaths.

Members of a family which lives on the upper floor of the duplex house said that no odor of gas reached them when they had heard nothing that indicated anything untoward on the floor below.

Neighbors noticed for some time that Mrs. Driggs was despondent. Mrs. Driggs left a note in which she said that she was afraid of the future. It included, however, the telephone number of her sister, Mrs. George Shortmire of New Gardens.

Shortmire was reached through a corrected number, but said that she could have nothing to say concerning the tragedy.

Marconi Predicts Cheaper Sending Of Radio Messages

London, July 2.—(Associated Press by mail).—Another great step in the development of wireless telegraphic transmission has been realized, says Senator Marconi, who has returned to London after a two months' experimental cruise in his yacht "Electra."

A system has been evolved by the Italian inventor whereby wireless messages are transmitted with a minimum of electrical power, and at very low cost.

Up to a distance of 2,230 miles, not only with a very much smaller amount of power and energy, but faster and more efficiently than with the ordinary system of long-distance wireless," said Senator Marconi. "When the new system is adopted, it will mean that a power station for long distance work can be erected at much less cost than at present."

Interference from Cape Verde Islands, off the African coast, to London. To send messages clearly and more rapidly over those 2,500 miles took less power than a message from London to Paris by the ordinary methods."

Senator Marconi explained that these advantages were gained by the utilization of waves that have not before been used. Given the necessary mechanical element, he said, messages could be sent clearly seven times faster than the present rate, and that the public and the newspapers would ultimately

Within the rounded grace of the pictured lines of this Bedroom Suite, apply the deep and rich tone of Walnut on a burling graining.

If you can still keep your mind off the harmony of curves, think of the medallions as having a lighter shade bordered by black. And all of the seven pieces are genuine Walnut, there being also a chair, bench and night table. Isn't it wonderful for $247?

have the benefit of much cheaper commercial charges. His opinion is that wireless is only in its infancy, and that the future has in store greater marvels than have been revealed in the past.

Commenting on recent experiments conducted by American inventors looking to privacy in wireless telephonic conversation, Senator Marconi said he was afraid such an achievement was still far off. "I do not say that wireless telegraphy will ever be an absolutely private means of transmission, but I will say that in future it will be possible to make it much more difficult for anyone to get messages not intended for them."

Senator Marconi proposes to go on another experimental trip in a few weeks' time, and later to try the new system of long-distance wireless from the coast of the United States to Europe.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETINGS

Ernest Arbo acted as chairman for the annual school meeting of the Milford Superior school on Tuesday evening. Richard Mullane, the treasurer, reported a very satisfactory year. It was decided that some slight repairs were necessary to the buildings. Frederick Boyd was elected trustee in place of Boyd Allen, retiring. Harvey Arbo was elected auditor. The assessment of $3,000 for the coming year was passed.

The sum of $750 was voted for school purposes at the recent annual meeting of the Randolph school and the secretary was instructed to place the tax bills of the people in the hands of a collector. Some repairs were decided on.

GIRL FALLS OFF PET ELEPHANT AS BOY PLAYS ON ITS HEAD

New York, July 19.—"Handstands" performed by Roger Richards, 8 years old, on the head of Alice, the Bronx Zoo elephant, before crowds of spell-bound children proved nearly fatal to Mildred Protest, 10, of Newark.

Mildred was one of several youthful passengers riding in a howdah-like saddle on the elephant's back who were properly carried away by little Roger's carryings on. She leaned too far in an attempt to see better, and fell to the ground, eight feet below and struck on her head. She was taken to Fordham Hospital, suffering from possible fracture of the skull.

Alice, a children's favorite at the Zoo, seemed to sense the accident for she stopped at once. Roger is the son of Dick Richards, the elephant's keeper.
