Mr. Emmerson and his col-leagues, who were held to account for their part in the failure, are now able to show. In his budget speech Mr. Fielding announced that for the first ten months of the present fiscal year the revenue was only $115,705 short of meeting the working expenses, and that the prospect is good for the wiping out of this diminished deficit before the end of June. This change in the financial showing has been effected by a courageous dealing with the affairs of the road. Courage was required as well as ability and knowledge, and for this the credit is due not only to the minister of railways himself, but also

But still the Globe contends that the problem of the Intercolonial is not yet solved. "It is a much larger problem," it says, "than one year's effort could solve. It is just the application to government business of the everyday principles and procedure of ordinary private business; just the elimination of graft and pull; just the instillation of energy and honesty and non-sense. What he would have done as president of a private railroad he has done as minister of railways. only instead of looking after the interests of a few shareholders he has been working for the Canadian people. The Intercolonial is a good road with a good and growing traffic, and it has now the only other element needed to

THE REVOLUTION.

The Russian revolution has begun, and in a manner ominously similar to ment has formulated and presented its demands. The government has refused to grant them. Parliament has voted its want of confidence in the government and has demanded the resignation of Premier Goremykin with his Czar-appointed ministers, and the substitution instead of a ministry responsible to the people's representatives. Parliament has also declared its intention of going ahead with the country's business as though the government and the fundamental law were non-existent. In other words, parliament has openly declared itself the supreme power, just as the French states general, convened by Louis XVI., did when it made itself the national convention.

This is revolution-nothing less, Wheher it shall be another red revolution depends now upon the Czar and his government. If Goremykin and his coleagues bow to the storm and resign making way for a constitutional ministry, the great reform will have been accomplished. If they hold to their places they must dismiss parliament; there is no room for both. And the discivil war, and only God knows how much of bloodshed and horror before the people triumph.

For the people will win, must win. All previous attempts at revolt have been scattered, sporadic, abortive. This this action, the hearty sympathy of the vast majority of all the Russians. The ers will intensify ten-fold the hatred of the cities and towns, and its failure or to offer any definite solution of its inability, before it knew the facts. been indifferent to all this revolution-It has taken a good deal to banish ary clamor, and, as a rule, loyal to the Miss Farris, who was fifty years of (New York Tribune.) Some investigator of curious subjects has discovered that the inventor of travelling incognito was Peter the Great, of Russia. The next after the famous Russian sovereign to adopt the practice was Joseph II. of Austria, who in 1777 made a little stay in Paris under the title of Count von Faukenstein During the revolutionary period Louis XVIII buried his temporarily useless royal dignity under the privacy of Comte de Lille, while Chas. X. passed as Comte de Marles. The ex-Empress Eugenie in her splendor frequently took little trips as the Comtesse de Pierrefonds. King Leopold does so still as Comte de Ravenstein.

TURN ON THE SEARCHLIGHT.

TURN ON THE SEARCHLIGHT.

(Toronto Globe.)

The one thing for the prime minister and his colleagues to keep strictly in view is, not the clumsy stage-play of the opposition, but the integrity of the government's administration and the honor of the country. There must be no hesitation about turning the searchlight on any incident that shows the marks of wrongdoing. If the furnishing of the "Arctic" is proved to have been extravagant, at an extortionate cost, and in any way scandalous, those who planned it and profited by it are not friends of the government, but enemies, and they have no claim to the slightest consideration. The same is true to the impression of the opposition to call pack. per tribunal, and if, when judgment is slightest consideration. The same is true to the immigration affair. The facts of that miserable business are being brought to light before the pro-

Do You Weigh Enough?

Everyone of average intelligence knows something of the immense value of Cod Liver Oil and Iron as remedial agents. Consequently no one would be surprised to hear that very satisfactory results had followed from giving "FERROL" (a perfect emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, Iron and Phosphorus) in cases where Iron and Oil appeared to be needed. But, when we ask people to believe that in an actual and scientific test made by an eminent and wellknown physician, twenty-five bottles of

were given to ten patients and the result was a net increase in weight of ninety-five pounds, we are aware that we are asking a great deal; nevertheless we are prepared to prove that this is an absolute fact, by evidence that no reasonable person can reject. Moreover, this is no isolated instance, but only one of many equally remarkable.

Very few people properly appreciate the importance of maintaining their normal weight.

There is no surer indication of approaching disease than a considerable loss of weight and even where this is not the case, a man whose weight is not up to the average is always in danger of contracting any of the gerin diseases which are unfortunately so prevalent. On the other hand, while his weight is well maintained, a man is practically proof against attack, and if disease is already present, the fact that the weight is being increased is proof positive that the disease is being

The desirability of maintaining the weight should therefore be apparent. In view of this we can confidently recommend "FERROL" as the surest, speediest and most effective medicine by which the weight may be maintained or restored.
