One Man's Fight.

John G. Woolley, a man who has won a high reputation as a public speaker, and who has for some time been probably more in demand for platform work than any other temperance speaker in the United States, had at one time a terrible experience of the liquor appetite to which he had been a victim. For the sake of help it might give to others, he has told some of the story of his terrible battle, and here is a part of the record:—

I shall never drink again, but one night, in a New England train, and very ill, I met a stranger who pitied me and gave me a quick, powerful drug out of a small vial, and my pain was gone in a minute or two, but alcohol was licking

What would you take in cash, to have that put into your life?

That is to be my portion until my dying day, but if merciful, patient time shall cauterize and heal the old dishonorable wounds, and cover them with repulsive but impervious cicatrices, yet because I had those wounds I am to be through my whole life considered a moral cliff-dweller, a creature of precipices, where one false step ends all; and so, denied full confidence of my fellow men—the highest grace of life to strive for, in this world; and I am told I have a Christian enemy or two who wait on tip-toe of expectancy and cheerful prophecy the sure, near coming of my final plunge back into the Dead Sea of drink.

Several years ago, at another time, after a long lecture tour in the west, I up my very blood with tongues of flame. I should have gotten drunk that night if I could. I thought of everything—of my two years of clean life, of the meeting I was going to, vouched for by my friend and brother, D. I. Moody, of the bright little home in New York; of Mary and the boys; I tried to pray, and my lips framed oaths, I reached up for God, and He was gone, and the fiercest fiend of hell had me by the throat and shouted, "Drink, Drink, Drink!" I said, "But Mary—but the boys;" it said "To hell with Mary—come on to the saloon!"

It was not yet daylight, Sunday morning, when I stood on the platform at Pawtucket alone. I flew from saloon to saloon, but they were shut up, so were the drug stores and all that day, locked in my room at the hotel I fought my fight and won it in the evening by the grace of God; but the people of Pawtucket never knew that the man who spoke to them that night had been in hell all day.

telegraphed to my wife in Boston; "I will arrive home tonight at 11." The train was late, and long after midnight I came under her window. The light was burning, and I knew that she was waiting for me. I let myself in; there were two flights of stairs, but twenty would have been nothing to me, my heart was hauling away, like a great balloon. She stood in the middle of our room as pale and cold and motionless as a woman of snow, and I knew at a glance that the sweet, brave life was in torture.

"What is it?" I cried, "what is the matter?" and in my arms she sobbed out the everlasting tragedy of her wedded life: "Nothing—at any rate, nothing ought to be the matter. I do believe in you; I knew you would come home; but I have listened for you so many years, that I seem to be just one great ear when you are away beyond your time; I seem to have lost all sense but that of hearing when you are absent unexplained, and every sound on the street
