

metatarsal bones. If no cutaneous nerve has become superficial by piercing the deep fascia in the area to be anaesthetised, this area may simply be encircled by a ring of cocaine injections (Hackenbruch). The accompanying figures after Spalteholz indicate the site at which the cutaneous nerves can be treated with injections after they have pierced the deep fascia (Figs. 4-11).

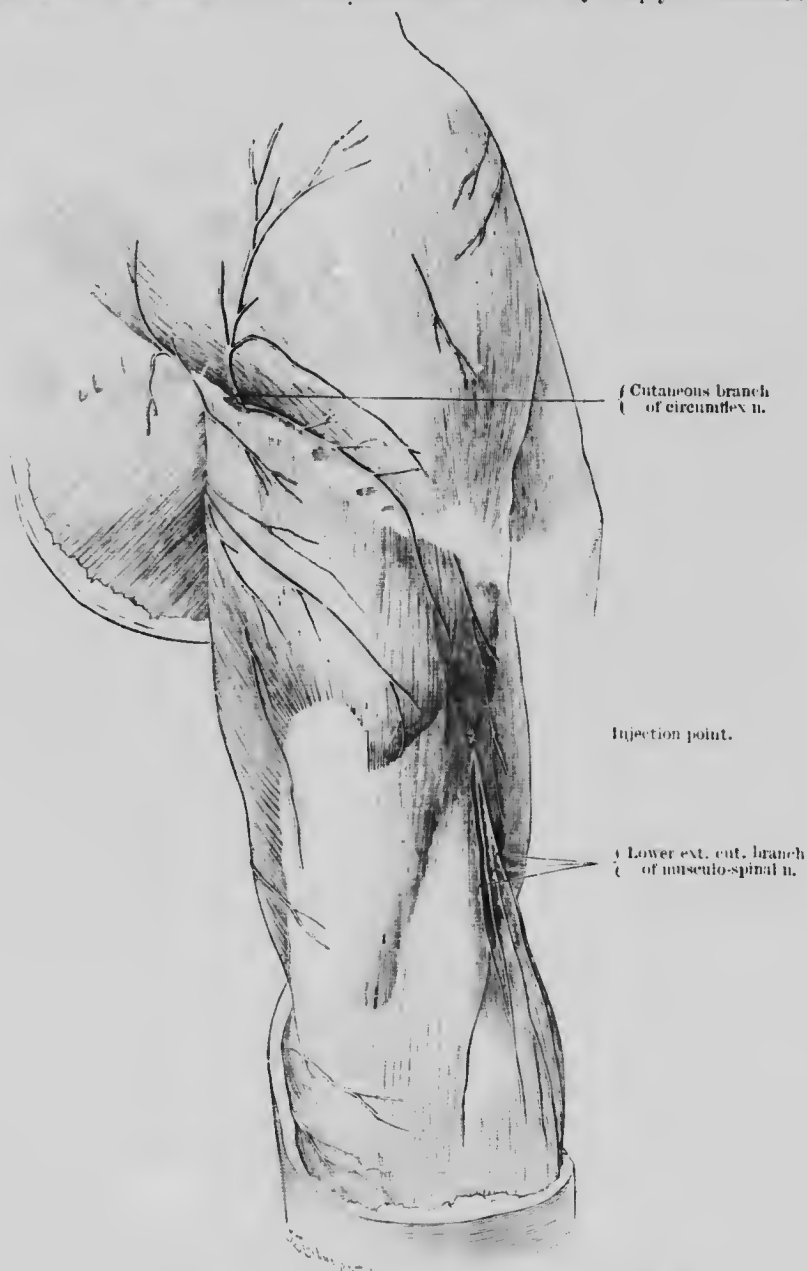

FIG. 5.—Conduction anaesthesia (Braun) of back of upper arm (after Spalteholz).