He Fell From a Window While Intoxicated:

Woman who was With Him at the Time Clears Herself.

Windsor, Oct. 5.—Edward Saucier, who fell from a third storey window in a hotel here and was killed, was not alone at the time. On his table were found a bottle of liquor, a woman's veil and a pair of kid gloves.

S. A. Fisher, who rooms on the floor below, said he noticed a woman going to Saucier's room early in the evening, and Saucier followed her a little later. She had been a frequent visitor at the room and he had often heard high words between them. Immediately afwords between them. Immediately af-ter the accident he had seen the wo-man hurrying out of the building and making her way toward the ferry

When he met his death Saucier had removed his coat and one of his shoes, and had unlaced the other. It is supposed that he was sitting on the window sill taking off his other shoe when he fell.

Saucier was 45-years of age, and had been a motorman on the Windsor street railway up till yesterday afternoon, when he threw up his job and said he was going to St. Thomas to get a job as brakeman on the Wabash. His wife died a few years ago, and his two daughters live in Blenheim. He had two brothers residing in Wind-

"Saucier had been drinking all the evening," she said. "When he came in he was very drunk. He started to undress and staggered toward the window, stumbled against the casement and fell out to his death. The window came almost to the floor and window came almost to the floor and was wide open."

Mrs. Butler explained her presence in the room by saying that she was an old friend of Saucier's and did his laundry work for him. She also kept his room in shape. She denied that she, too, was drunk.

The police are satisfied the death was an accident and it is unlikely there will be an inquest. The woman will be released.

AFTER HARD FIGHTING

he B Lish Captured the Ashantee's Positio 1-Flying column in Pursult of the Fleeling Natives.

London, Oct. 4.-A despatch to the Morning Post from Kumassie reports that heavy fighting took place last Sunday between Colonel Willcock's column and the Ashantees at Abu Asu. "After heavy firing," says the despatch, "the British column made an effectual attempt to charge the Ashantee positions, but was obliged to retire and resume the rif's duel, while awaiting reinforcements. Even-tually, after hard work, Col. Wilcocks captured the positions and occupied the village of Isansu without opposi-tion. Subsequently the British car-ried three other villages at the point of the bayonet, and burned them, Seventy Ashantees were killed. The British losses were Maj. Melliss and Capt, Luard, severely wounded, three officers slightly wounded; three men killed and 28 others wounded. A flying column, of 800 men, with two guns, was sent Monday in pursuit of

SALTY WHITE MEN.

They Are Not Relished by Cannibal as Well as the Native Product.

as Well as the Native Product.

Cannibalism is not so prevalent today as it was a quarter of a century ago, says the Cincinnati Enquirer. It is necessary to penetrate to very remote parts of the world, where the explorer and the missionary have not carried civilizing influences. There are many tribes of savages, however, now in a semicivilized state who, not so many years ago, were the worst kind of cannibals. All the present generation, says a returned missionary, are converted to civilized practices, in large part, and only the old folks retain memories of the barthe old folks retain memories of the bar-barous orgies the tribe used to indulge in. "Once, when a new young man came out to join me, one of the first things he out to join me, one of the first things he confided to me was that he was very anxious to see and talk to a real live cannibal. Accordingly I sent for one of the old, gray headed men of the tribe, who had been a fierce warrior in days gone by. He was a tall and stately fellow, and he saluted us profoundly as he entered. As he could speak only his native language, I had to interpret for the curious young man.

"'Have you really eaten human flesh?

"I interpreted this, and the tame old savage grinned and nodded his head. "'Yes, frequently when I was a young man,' was the reply, with a grin.
"'Did you ever eat white men?"

"Yes, whenever they could be caught."
"And people of your own color?"
"Always when we made war we ate our captives, if we were victorious. not, they ate us.' 'Which tasted the best-white man or black? "'Black man best; nice and fuicy. White man tough and too salty.' "It is more than likely that the white men who fell into their hands were old sailors, who had lived for months and years on salted meats, and what, with the salt air, they were no doubt so im-pregnated that it would be very notice-able."

EXCITING SEA FIGHTS.

How Mediterranean Fishermen Band Together to Catch Tunnies.

One of the most thrilling and wonderful sights in the world is that of the tunny fisheries of the Mediterranean sea, says the New York Press. The pursuit of these great and swift fish is not a mere tame operation of netting. It is a ight between man and sea creatures such as is duplicated nowhere except in the whale fisheries. The tunny is a huge mackerel. He is a predaceous fish, and his course through the seas is that of a destroyer without parallel. So deadly is the tunny to the schools of herring and similar food fish that he is called the herring hog. In our waters he is known more generally as the horse mackerel. The tunny fisheries are distinctly European, and they are the oldest industry that is known in the Mediterranean sea. To capture them men must band them-selves together in large bodies, for fishermen singly could do nothing with these fish, which grow to a length of ten feet and weigh over half a toh sometimes. Therefore there is a system of co-operation on the coasts that are visited by the tunny, a system which dates back to the Phonicians, who were great tunny catchers in their time. The perfection of this system is due, among other things, to the fact that the big fish have absolutely regular habits. In normal times they can be relied on to make their appearance at certain periods almost to the minute. it is in huge schools that can to afar, for they scour the waters like ships of war, and the leapings of their prey

CATCHING TUNNY FISH.

and the leapings of their own bulky bodies beat the deep into white foam and lather. Since they are so exact in their habits, the fishermen prepare for them always before they arrive. At some designated spot are spread enormous nets, exceedingly deep and made of the strongest of line. These are not designed to catch the tunnies. They are spread out merely to force the fish to edge in and in until they are led to the real prison net, which is a vast contrivance set in immense square and powerful enough to defy anything that swims. As soon as the last of the school has entered this boxlike inclosure the sides of the great net are raised at a signal. At first the imprisoned fish do not show any signs of alarm. But as the net rises, inch by linch, from the water depths, gleaming, swordlike backs appear here and there above the surface, darting with incredible with respect to side of the ble swiftness from side to side of the net. Each instant more of these living blades appear above the surface. Then the fish begin to leap. Here one launches himself straight out of the water, 500 himself straight out of the water, 500 pounds of glorious life, toward the sky, to crash back into the sea with a fialilike blow of sides and tail that makes the ocean echo. Another and another rises and falls back. Soon the scene is as if the abyses of the sea were spouting their inhabitants, for hundreds of immense silver flashing fish rise everywhere at once within the net.

Fatherless.

There's something about the little black dress that touches a man in a very tender spot. He pats the little one on the head, puts some pennies in her hand, swallows hard and then—starts out to make his own children fatherless. There is no doubt that many a man is taken from his family by reglect of simple is no doubt that many a man is taken from his family by neglect of simple precautions which would preserve his health. Disease generally begins nowadays in "stomach trouble" because the meals are hasty and the food not digested. From that beginning come disorders of the blood, liver, kidneys, heart or nerves. The use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition will avert the catastrophe of more serious disease. It strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, nourishes the nerves, and builds men up in both brain and body.

"I can say to you, one bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured me sound and well, after suffering two long years with stomach disease," writes W. H. Braswell, of McAdenville, Gaston Co., N. C. "My health is worth all the world to me. I win praise you as long as I live."

money.
Such a room, situated on the north side of the house and formerly used as a repository for trunks, was recently converted into a charming study by the resourceful mistress. The walls and ceilings, sloping and rregularly angled, were admirably adapted for a well-chosen display of pictures. They were first covered with age-green cartridge paper. The only elief afforded to the unbroken color was a parrow band of yellow tulips as a boarder to break the line between the ceiling and side walls.

The floor was covered with greenfigured matting in a finely woven deign. On the side of the room where the ceiling sloped a trifle was placed green denim-covered couch with
