The Goal.
All your wonderful inventions,
All your losses vast and tall
All your great gun-framed vessels,
Keen for a day every wall.
With the passing of the ages
They shall pass and they shall fall.
As you sit among the idols
That your frantic gods adore,
As you count the hoarded treasures
That you think of precious worth,
Time is slipping from you, like the sand
In the bottom of the earth.
There shall come a great convulsion
Of a rushing tidal wave
Or a sound of mighty thunder
From a sudden earthquake.
And a looting world's possessions
Shall be lifted to the grave.
We are bringing back again
Buried ease and bust and calm
And the gods they worshipped then
In the strongest conventional sense,
Built by pretentious men.
Did they steal, lie and slaughter?
Did they steep their soul in shame?
Did they sell their sacred things
Just to win a passing fame?
Did they give the gift of honor
For the use of a name?
We are hurrying all together
Toward the silence and the night;
There is nothing worth the seeking
But the soul's most noble light—
There is nothing worth the doing
But the doing of the right.

Acadia University.
(From "The Bay East.")
Acadia University is located in Wolfville, on the main line of the Dominion Atlantic Railway, at the eastern end of the famous Cornwallis and Annapolis Valley. The situation, on an elevation overlooking the valley Minas Basin, and in full view of Cape Blomidon, is of unsurpassed beauty. A circle drawn with a radius of 125 miles from Wolfville as a centre will include over two-thirds of the population of the Maritime Provinces. Excellent railroads and steamship service make Wolfville very easy of access. We are informed by the historians of Acadia, that Wolfville is selected as the site of the College "both on account of the natural beauty of the situation and its central position." Passing years have only made the wisdom of the selection more and more manifest. Wolfville is a thoroughly up-to-date town, with sewerage system, water works and electric lights, and is in every way one of the most progressive communities in eastern Canada.

The buildings, eight in all, are well equipped for educational work. They comprise the main College Building, Carnegie Science Hall, Chipman Hall, Gymnasium, Acadia Ladies' Seminary, Horton Academy Home, E. W. Young Manual Training Hall and the College Women's Residence. The most recent of these, the Carnegie Science Hall, erected in 1909, at a cost of $35,000.00, is thoroughly up-to-date in arrangement and equipment. Beauty and attractiveness are combined with utility and stability. This equipment easily takes rank with the best in the Maritime Provinces.

To the sturdy Loyalist stock was principally due the earliest efforts for the promotion of higher education in the country now known as the Maritime Provinces of Canada. Largely as a result of this influence King's College was established, by members of the Church of England, at Windsor, in 1780, receiving in 1802, a Royal Charter and an annual grant of £1,000.00. During the early years of her history the restrictive character of the Constitution of King's College prevented the members of other religious denominations from enjoying her advantages, thus compelling the various religious bodies to make plans for colleges of their own. The restrictive tests above referred to were removed many years ago and are only mentioned here as accounting in some degree for the separate educational work of the various dissenting bodies.

These differences in point of view provoked much discussion in these early days with the result that the subject of Higher Education was kept before the people and produced abiding convictions of its value of which Acadia College, 1838, under the name of Queen's College. Their ancestors in New England had long been advocates of higher education. Harvard, Yale, and Brown Universities were outstanding evidences of this fact. With great wisdom, faith and vision these noble men, Rev. Edward Manning, Rev. C. Tupper, Rev. I. E. Bill, Rev. J. Johnston, under the powerful leadership of Rev. E. A. Crawley, and many others to whom we now refer as the fathers, overcame obstacles almost insurmountable, and laid solid foundations for these progressive institutions of the present day.

Rev. John Pryor, D. D., the first president, continued in office until 1851. During his incumbency a college building was erected of suitable size and ample accommodations. It was a time when people were poor and money was scarce. Persons without money were invited to contribute such goods as they could spare, which they contributed to the store. Farmers went into the forests to hew out the frame and provide building material. The women and girls provided articles of knitting and sewing. Donations of every sort were welcomed. Whatever could not be used in the building was turned into money. From the proceeds of such

Dr. J. M. Cramp, of Montreal, assumed the presidency in 1857. During his administration a Theological Department was established apart from the Arts Course. Several pro-mothers were added to the teaching staff, a considerable endowment secured and the attendance of students greatly increased. While Dr. E. A. Crawley will be long remembered as the founder of Acadia, yet Dr.

in 1859, Rev. T. Trotter, D. D., was appointed president. Dr. Trotter's period of leadership is signalized by two great financial campaigns, which added $305,000 to the resources of the University. This amount provided: (1) Payment of all debts; (2) Thorough repairs for all the buildings; (3) A thoroughly modern science building—the Carnegie Science Hall; (4) An additional of $120,000 to the endowment.

In 1907, Rev. Dr. W. B. Hutchinson was chosen president. He was succeeded in 1910 by Rev. G. B. Catten, M. A., B. D., Ph. D., who has already proved himself to be the possessor of the qualities which make for success in such a high position. In harmony with President Catten's progressive policy several profes-ors were added to the teaching staff, the salaries of professors have been raised, and a new Campaign inaugurated, looking toward the addition of $200,000 to the Endowment Fund. The success of this movement is assured as about two-thirds of the amount is already subscribed. By the revised Charter of 1891, the government of Acadia University is vested in a Board of Governors, consisting of twenty-four members, appointed by the United Baptist Convention of the Maritime Provinces. The effort to build a college building "without money" is one of the most interesting chapters in the history of any body of people of these provinces.
