In April and May the males make a great noise, bellowing like a bull. In the latter part of May they make they a rest, selecting a quiet place on the banks of a lake or river. It will be two or three feet lorg, built of sticks, grass and sand. The female lays from twenty-six to thirty-two eggs. They are as big around as a hen's egg and nearly twice as long. Boys hunt the eggs and sell them to the curio stores, where they are either hatched or blown out.

If he had capsized the boat I would have never lived to write this episode. He came up about twenty-five feet on the other side and turned toward the boat. He churned the water with his tail until the lake looked like Butter-milk Falls. I knew he was mad and that he was determined to get at me. He came toward the boat with his jaws open at such speed that if he had struck it it would have gone to pieces. Death, a horrible death, was staring me in the face and no help at hand. There were some people on the opposite shore watching the battle, but they had no boat, and if they had, could not reach me in time to be of any service.

He was going at such speed that he went fifteen or twenty feet before he turned and then he had to make a large circle, lashing the water into a foam. What a charming variation of park and rural landscapes and prettily bridged river scenes! Here and there an odded by constructed cottags in old fashioned farmyard, and occasionally a hoary church, that seems to have withstood the storms and ravages of ages. And such attractive little gardens around the boneses, such a tasteful arrangement of fruit trees and flower beds!

Buptisms, weddings, and funerals redisappointed, mad, furious, and came for the canoe with renewed vigor.

The spot was watched for some days and at last he was found sunning himself in his old bed, where he was shot. He measured fourteen feet and was thought to be 80 years old. The old al-ligator hunters said he attacked the boat because it was red, so for future safety I painted "Red Rover" white.

It differs from the funeral addiscrement in that for the marriage ceremony a plain black skirt and burning's German remedy, the universal pain and brides is surmounted by a broad royal white reiffed collar, such as Norwegian and Danish pastors wear over their ministerial gowns while officiating. The collar almost conflicts with the large myrde crown so that the roay face can barely peep from between the tulipshaped adornments. Transparent leather has lately been perfected and placed upon the market in Farls. It is considered that the process of letting light through the hide of an ox does not unfit it for footwear, and it is expected that the new material will soon appear as the latest fashionable fad.
