For a year past they had been engaged, and now, with money that he had earned in ferreting out the freight robbers and his brilliant prospects as engineer of the 'I nperial' there was no reason, Billy thought, why the marriage day should not be fixed upon.

His sweetheart lived near the middle of his new 'run' on the outskirts of a brisk little town where the railroad company had erected its big repair shop.

Like a flash they rounded the curve. As they did so, Billy's trained eyes saw a terribe sight.

The man seemed to become sober in a minute, and without noticing their jibes, took the holy book in his hands as tenderly as he would have lifted an infunt, and said to the bar-tender, 'Please wrap this in the cleanest piece of paper you have, Jim, but don't let it have the smell of wiskey about it. Then turning to the amaz d group, who watched lightning so close at hand that Nettie coiled up under her husband's oilcloth uttered a sharp scream of affright.
