

THOU ART NOT HUMAN

There are not two worlds, one for the living and one for the dead. There is only one world, and that is the world of the living. The dead are not in another world, they are simply gone. They are not suffering, they are not in pain, they are not in any way affected by the things of this world. They are at rest, and that is all that matters.

VARIETIES

To claim my brotherhood now of ease, For as the result of evening air, And yet I remember that I had, Through my window, the breeze that blew, That was not in my brother's hair, But that was in my brother's hair, And that was in my brother's hair, And that was in my brother's hair.
