FOOTMARKS OF THE TRUST

Look at the footmarks of R. B. Bennett and the elevator trust.

On March 7, before the writs were issued. nats in Winnipeg closed at 35 cents a bushel. ' One month later, on April 9, after R. B. Bennett had become an issue in the election in Alberta and the elevator trust was endeavoring to break the force of the argument, oats closed in Winnipeg at 347-8, a reduction of 1-8 of a cent in one month. On March 7, the elevator price for oats in Alherta was 20 cents. One month later, when R. B. Bennett was backed up in the corner explaining himself and his trust the price of oats at elevators in Alberta, was 231/2 cents, an increase of 31/2 cents.

Every day the elevator trust is bidding up the price of oats.

And then who will say that the elevator trust not conducting the campaign against the govment The big issue in this election is the elevator

FORECASTS OF ELECTIONS

Election predictions by election prophets are not often of very great value when the prophets ppen to be election workers. Frequently the preictions are made for the effect they will have upon the elector. The wise party organizer believes that the voter always wants to be with the winner, and if he can induce him to believe that his party is the winner, why, it is very good business. Of course party men, keen at the work, also get strange ideas. There were people in the last business of the province. Apparently, also, there is not complete harmony of opinion among Con-

Really, it seems as if the central Conservative organization should call Mr. Bennett down for going about the country dividing their forces by preaching a doctrine directly opposite to the posi-tion taken by all the rest of the party in the province, including its leader. A most presump-tuous thing, it would seem, for one man to set up a claim to greater wisdom than the rest of the parliament house, the capital having been determined. it is proposed that competitive de-signs shall be invited from all parts of the world. The circumstance clearly illustrates two things. One is, that R. B. Bennett, who is now trying to tell the farmers what is good for them, is a corporationist before anything else, so much so that he is willing to imperil the chances of his party by opposing a measure, which apparently everyone else in Alberta considers to be in the taw tawa, where they may be inspected by Canadian architects.

These Verandah mats were included in that consignment, which came to us direct from our own representative in Japan. And now we bring them forward for quick clearance at the very time they are most needed, and at prices we can never hope to better. You see, we bought them as samples, and as such bought them at a great advantage in price. Furthermore, as samples, they passed the customs. Hence our position to offer them at such ridiculously low figures. Though quantities in each size are limited, there is generous choice, size and prices, a few of which we quote below:

servatives would get fifteen to eighteen seats, and perchance they might reach as high as twenty or twenty-five. But that seemed to cause some consternation among the faithful and later on the aper says that the chances of the party are a little etter. But though it produces its figures to the satisfaction of the party workers on one page, it defies them on the other by a statement like this: "As has been said, no sane person familiar with the political situation in the province can believe therwise than that the government will be reurned to power by a large majority."

And that last sentence is the truth and about all that is definitely known about it. It is difficult to go further into details. It is unreasonable to suppose that a party without very much of a leader and without anything of a policy can go up successfully against a government which has given good administration, excellent legislation, and has been clean and free from graft. It is likely that some opposition candidates through their own personality, or superior organization may capture some seats or hold some they have, but the idea of anything like a general upheaval, under the circumstances, is too unreasonheaval, under the circumstances, is too unreasonable to consider. DPPOSING THE MACHINERY BILL It appears evident that R. B. Bennett does not place a very high estimate on the abilities of six of the seven Conservative members of the last speech at Olds Monday evening. Mr. Bennett was dealing with the Farm Im-plement bill which he is opposing very strenuous-by. He told his audience the bill is all that is vicious and dangerous. When a farmer in the audience inquired why all the Conservative members of the source supported the bill if that was true. Mr. Bennett replied: They did not all support the bill, though six did. The lawyer among the opposition was not oppose it."

And The Herald forgets to tell its readers that fortunate of their fellow men.

Obviously, Mr. Bennett has a poor opinion of six-sevenths of the Conservative members of the last house which includes the man he is asking the people of Alberta to place in charge of all the equal to its present majority. It should win by even more if the electors vote win by even more if the electors vote win by even more if the electors vote happened. And The Herald forgets to fell its readers that the opposition has not objected to a single item of expenditure authorized by the government, but complains that the expenditure should be greater still. A Noteworthy Display of Home Furnishings

Which Will Provide for the Furnishing and Refurnishing of H omes as They Should Be Furnished.

TO THOSE who have planned, or perhaps are planning right now, on furnishing a new home or refurnishing the old one, an hour or so spent in this new Carpet section will provide almost endless suggestion to the newest and best ideas, and will probably impress most forcibly the fact that prices, too, are a little lower here than in most stores. There's scarcely a day passes that does not bring to this big Carpet Section so ne new and beautiful production in handsome floor covering. One of the new arrivals, unpacked as late as last Thursday, an 1 worthy of special mention is a product of one of the most wonderful carpet looms yet invented. This clever machine weaves a rug, the like of which would defy an expert to tell it from a genuine hand-tufted rug. The artistic and bewitching blending of color is to be found only in rare Oriental rugs costing about ten times the price. These wonderful rugs, produced on a more wonderful machine, come in small but desirable sizes only, of a very rich, long pile and decidedly distinctive in appe rance. And best of all, these new rugs cannot be judged by their prices, as they have been marked to the level of much more commonplace productions; sizes 27x54 inches, selling as low as $7.50, with other sizes priced in like proportion.
