THE END OF ENGHEN

(By John F. Macdonald)

By the handsome and excellent majority of 392, the French chamber of deputies has pronounced the doom of a gambling casino within a radius of sixty-three miles of Paris. I, however, that the newly-buried remains but a single casino, and that, therefore, it was this particular chamber that resolved almost unanimously to exterminate. And high up for Enghien, the place hit by the new gaming bill, lies on the very threshold of Paris, a mere twelve minutes' train journey; and, finally, it is Enghien, with its gaudy casino, its shady old park, and an odorous lake, you might row on the lake, for sixpence an hour, in a tub of a boat, with a very small boy or a feeble, infirm, or decrepit person, who might catch nothing. For not even the vilest and most ill-famed fish of Enghien's stagnant lake, which is coated with green stuff, mosquitoes swarmed around it—the park was the nightly playground of the rich, and a grove in a corner was used to mark the seat of an awful sulphurous syphilis—the "Elisir de Vie," said the Enghien advertisements. "Ten centimes a large glass." Amongst other virtues, the "Elisir" was supposed to cure "ALL" affections of the throat. And I remember heroically drinking of Enghien's sulphurous water—and I also remember being told by a pessimist that the spring was a myth, and that, in reality, the "Elisir" came from the lake. Perhaps the pessimist was right. On the other hand, I still live.

In the Toils

Suddenly, changes and changes at Enghien. The lake dragged and cleaned. War upon the bats and mosquitoes. A fine brand new grove for the "Elisir." Flowers and summer houses for the park. Modern pensions, garages, hotels. And a large, gaudy casino—and roulette and blackjack—and a special railway service from Paris to Enghien—and, to quote the advertisements, "All the Pleasures of Ostend and Monte Carlo at Your Door."

Instantaneous success of Enghien at your door. The railway fare from Paris was a franc—so that the thrifty, small bourgeois exclaimed, "Allons voir Enghien!" and went there forthwith and was exhilarated by the lights and the music, and soon found himself staking silver pieces on the tables.

For no visitor was too "small" for the Enghien Casino. Let everybody come, was the management's motto. You needn't play if you don't want to—but just come and see us. And how courteous were the croupiers, how charming the attendants—and if you lost your very last franc and couldn't pay your fare back to Paris, why—no need to worry—the management advanced it. "Just as they do at Monte Carlo." Thus beheld M. le Bourgeois in the toils, and stout Mink la Fourgeois caught also; and, on Sunday afternoon, witness Enghien invaded by hosts of small people who had hithered the Sabbath simply and pleasantly in the Bois de Boulogne, the Luxembourg Gardens, and the parks of Versailles and St. Cloud.

Roulette and baccarat at "Your Door." Inevitably, it was back to the door not only with empty pockets, but with obligations, miseries, perhaps disaster to face. Embezzlements—because of Enghien. Prison, sometimes suicide—all through Enghien. These disasters and tragedies the examining magistrates of Paris constantly and urgently reported to the government. "Enghien has become a plague-spot," stated a magistrate. "The government must agitate."

The Old—and the New. But the government and Messieurs les Deputes didn't agitate. Indeed, certain cabinet ministers and deputies were also to be encountered gambling at Enghien—and elegant Parisians and small tradespeople of Paris in arms against Enghien. Emotionally they demanded, "Is Paris to go bankrupt, is Paris to disappear, is Paris to die?"

Back to the Past. But at last, under compulsion, the government has "agitated"—and it is Enghien, and not Paris, that is doomed to expire. Already there's a gloom about the place. Its toilette is neglected. For lack of its daily cleansing the lake is once again covered with green stuff. The pessimists and other charlatans are packing up; the special swift trains have been suspended; the Enghien management is searching and searching for a favorable site for a casino exactly and precisely sixty-three miles distant from Paris. "On ferme, on ferme." It is the End of Enghien at the Door. Back to the past, to former stagnant conditions. "On est ferme, rien ne va plus." Thick-er and slimmer the coating on Enghien's lake, and return of the bats and mosquitoes.

Literary Test for Immigrants. Washington, June 13.—The Burnett-Billingham immigrant bill imposing a literary test and drastic changes in the present immigration laws will be re-introduced today by Representative Burnett, of Alabama.

I have made a poll of the new house," Mr. Burnett said, "and I find that it stands nearly 5 to 1 in favor of an immigration measure. The Senate, passed this bill over President Taft's veto in the last congress, but the house failed by a narrow margin."

"The literary test clause of the measure would require immigrants over 16 years old to be able to read English or some European language or dialect."

Crowning at Winnipeg. Winnipeg, June 13.—Robert Hunter, a boat used 37 while swimming behind a boat rowed by a companion near the canoe club on the Red river, yesterday, was seized with cramps and sank before his companions could reach the spot.

French Service Bill.

Paris, June 13.—The government scored a victory in the chamber yesterday in regard to the debate on the three years' military service bill. By the vote of 388 to 160 the chamber agreed to devote three morning and three evening sittings a week to the discussion of the bill in order to finish the debate before the holidays, which begin on July 24, the anniversary of the fall of the Bastille.

Can Stop Circulation Ten Minutes.

Paris, June 13.—Surprised research has proved that operations in the thoracic cavity can be performed as easily as in the abdomen, according to Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Institute for medical research, New York. In the course of a lecture today at the Beaumont hospital in Paris, the Nobel prize winner declared experiments on animals had demonstrated the heart to be an organ of very great resiliency and that it does not suffer harm if the circulation is interrupted for five or even ten minutes.

HEALTH AWAITS GOOD DIGESTION

When the Stomach is Wrong the Whole Body suffers—How to Keep It Healthy

Indigestion is one of the most distressing malaises afflicting mankind. The stomach is unable to perform the work nature calls on it to do, and the result is extreme pain after eating, nausea, heartburn, painful flatulency, and a host of other troubles, and often a loss of sleep, even though the sufferer is half starved. People with poor digestion are prone to try all sorts of experiments to aid the process of digestion, but there is only one way in which the trouble can be actually cured, and that is through the blood. That is why the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cures even the most obstinate cases of indigestion. They make the rich, red blood, that strengthens the stomach and its powers, thus enabling it to do its work. The process is simple, but the result means a good appetite, and increased health and pleasure in life. Mr. R. Lussier, of Sorel, Que., offers ample proof of this. He says: "For several years I was a sufferer from indigestion and the consequence I suffered after meals was often almost unendurable. Often I would go without a meal rather than undergo the suffering that followed. Accompanying the trouble I had headaches, dizziness, and often a feeling of nausea. All the time I was taking one medicine after another in the hope of getting relief, but without avail. Finally I read of the case of a similar sufferer cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I took the pills steadily for about six weeks with the result that I was fully cured, and could eat anything I cared for. I may add that I have not since had any return of the trouble."

If you are suffering from indigestion do not waste time experimenting, but begin to cure yourself today with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which go right to the root of the trouble through the blood. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.00, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
