London's men were all stars. Cossey came through with the puck for soring a great many times, but was ably assisted by the other forwards, spedy, accurate shots invariably found the goal, and toward the finish when speedy accurate shots invariably found the goal, and toward the finish when contest developed into a farce, he joked with the Grimsby men. He stole puck from them, slipped it back and forth, and wound up by passing backwillings his legs to one of his mates on a couple of occasions.

Immy Orr had a real good night, and with tantalizing deliberateness completed the misery of the Grimsby visitors in the second half by coolly carrying the puck to within a couple of feet of the nets and policing it in. He worked this man successfully on two occasions, and wound up by winning a bet he made prior to the contest that he would score five himself. He had a good margin at that, and couble due number had he desired.

Lacky was there as usual with the whiriwind speed, and by injecting the most ticlous variety of shots into his play added to Grimsby's wee. Collins was anticlous variety of shots into his play added to Grimsby's wee. Collins was untiller light in London's firmament. He worked in with that combination beautifully, and repeatedly broke up dangerous rushes to take a lone spurt to the nets.
