speakers were unable to attend owing to illness so that this year's convention was not as large as that of past years. The attendance throughout the convention, however, was good, and many interesting matters were dealt with.

H. Hinriechs Jun. of Erie, Pa., gave an instructive address this afternoon on the proper care of fish, so as to avoid a herringless Lake Erie. He declared that many of the methods adopted by fishermen to make big hauls are nothing less than an absolute destruction of the fishing industry. Fish that are immature and not fit for market purposes are killed by millions annually by the use of trap nets, declared the speaker, and if there is any law possible to prevent this it should be passed at the earliest possible date. Mr. Hinriechs was emphatic in his statement that unless more care is taken the fishermen will be unable to make a catch. He urged the adoption of some measure making it compulsory for every fishing port to provide an allotment of spawn each season to the nearest hatchery and in this way replenish the supply.
