PROPOSED MEETING IN HIS BE-HALF AT MONTREAL.

Opinions of the French-Canadian Press-An Actress' Unconsidered Joke Causes an Uprear.

MONTREAL, Aug. 6.—A public meeting to discuss the position of Riel has been called for Sunday afternoon. Among the speakers will be Hon. R. Laffamme, Q.C., late minister of justice, Dr. Frechette, the poet laureate, and several well-known lawyers. It is stated by the promoters that all citizens should reasonably unite in the meeting, as it is a principle that is as much at stake as an individual. The dread penalty, they argue, is never en-forced in Great Britain or Ireland for political offences and no capital punishment was inflicted at the close of the American civil war upon those who had borne the most prominent part in fomenting and sustaining the insurrection.

La Presse abuses Riel's lawyers, who it says conducted the case very poorly, and Le Monde says it was certainly too much, if it was not out of place, for Judge Richardson to say that the accused should expect no commutation. Mr. Richardson has nothing to do with the intervention of a power uperior to his own or with the exercise of a prorogative reserved to others than him-self, and moreover Le Monde is sure that neither the queen nor the government had commissioned him to be their interpreter in the matter.

This forbids us to regard Southern soldiers as criminals, over whose defeat Englishmen can rejoice." The article next criticizes America's "grand funeral boom," and says "it would have been more humane to have buried the Northern general with less ostentation." The Gazette then attacks one of its English clergymen, and asks, "Why should a dignitary of the English church use such language as Canon Farrar did on the occasion? It was as a man of war alone that he talked of Grant, who might have been treated in a better way than that by a christian church, and in a church more than any other associated with the greatness of the English people. Canon Farrar treated with extraordinary forgetfulness lessons which every religious teacher should have drawn. He sniffed battle afar off twenty years after it had ceased. Indeed, he was more like a soldier than a priest. The college of cardinals is ostensibly secruited from persons who pretend to the honer of its membership on the strength of extraordinary virtues, piety, learning, or spiritual achievement; and the council of Trent, in addition to demanding from candidates for the cardinalate the same religious distinctions and ecclesiastical qualities which were desiderated in the occupants of the episcopate, made it an occupants of the episcopate, made it an instruction to the pope that they should be ohosen, as far as possible, from among the most capable persons in all parts of Roman Catholic christendem. Gifts of birth and of rank presently came, however, to count for eligibility as if they were gifts of the Spirit; and even kings sought for the relatives of kings a distinction which only by the attraction of mundane accidents of pomp and splendor could be considered as at all belonging to this world. For every cardinal was a potential pope; and every pope was a potential partisan or arbitrator in cases where sovereigns disputed with each other. In former times, indeed, kings had a right of presentation, and cardinals who had been created in accordance with such royal nominations were known as crown cardinals. The family pride and social pretensions of the popes themselves tended to aggravate this abuse of selection; and the result was nepotism and other favoritism. Paul V., for instance, is described as having had a particular aim throughout the whole course of his popedom, 1605-21, to ennoble the Corte Romons, to impart a new and singular majesty into the sacred college, and to select such persons as were proper by their own grandeur to defend the honor of the church. Accordingly, in these prometions, he advanced five princes "of very good instruction to the pope that they should be the first was been appropriated for the second of the control of t

In the journal of the corporation of 1882 the following appears:

Sinking funds—. The sums raised in respect of sinking funds have not been set aside from year to year as contemplated, but have been used for various purposes. As there have always been considerable amounts of debentures on hand these monies have practically been loaned to the works represented by the unsold debentures. We have therefore allowed to each sinking fund 6 per cent. per annum interest upon the balance from year to year.

displayed at the great Colonial and Indian displayed at the great Colonial and Indias exhibition to be held next year in London, Eng., under the auspices of the Prince of Wales. The best sort of an exhibit for this purpose will be a well selected collection of grains, including Indian corn in the straw of stalk, and grasses pulled up by the roots. These should be tied in small bundles, labelled with the grower's name, variety of grain or grass, number of lot, township and county. A. W. Wright, dominion government agent for this exhibition, wishes to state for the benefit of farmers who may desire exhibits of this kind that if they are left with the secretaries of township or county agricultural societies arrangements will be made to forward them without cost to the exhibitors.
