EASTER NUMBER

The Easter number of The Canadian Magazine will, as usual, be a special issue. It will contain the usual departments, the usual stories, but will have a special coloured cover, and special Easter Stories and Poems, besides one or two other features.

An Easter Event, by Jean Blewett, is a delightful little tale describing a happy ending to a family quarrel. It is told with all the sweet homeliness with which this gifted writer is famous.

Curling in Canada, by J. K. Munro, will be interesting to the 8,000 enthusiastic curlers in the Dominion. Mr. Munro is a curler of twenty years standing and an experienced writer on sport. This will be illustrated.

The Great Seaman of the North, Henry Hudson, will be the subject of an article by George Johnson, Dominion Statistician, whose previous articles on place-names have been well received.

Reminiscences of Lord Dufferin, who so recently passed away, and who was undoubtedly the most famous of Canada's Governors-General, will be the title of a short article by Arthur H. U. Colquhoun. This will be accompanied by Lord Dufferin's latest photo.

Horatio Walker and His Work, by M. L. Fairbairn, will describe the characteristics of a Canadian artist, whose paintings of French-Canadian life have been well received in New York. This contribution will be fully illustrated.

A gentleman writes from Montreal as follows: "Permit me to say that I think THE CANADIAN MAGAZINE in 1901 was better in a marked degree than ever before, and I am not ashamed now to place it side by side with almost any of those published across the line to the south of us, and I am pleased as a Canadian that I can say this. I wish you continued success."
