

THE TRUE WITNESS FOR 1882

The True Witness has within the past year made an immense trade in circulation, and if the testimony of a large number of our subscribers is not too flattering it may also claim a stride in general improvement.

This is the age of general improvement and the True Witness will advance with it. Newspapers are starting up around us on all sides with more or less pretensions to public favor.

But we want to extend its usefulness and its circulation still further, and we want its friends to assist us if they believe this journal to be worth $150 a year, and we think they do.

It was formerly two dollars per annum in the country and two dollars and a half in the city, but the present proprietors having taken charge of it in the hardest of times, and knowing that to many poor people a reduction of twenty or twenty-five per cent would mean something and would not only enable the old subscribers to retain it but new ones to enroll themselves under the reduction.

On receipt of $1.50, the subscriber will be entitled to receive the True Witness for one year.

Any one sending us the names of 5 new subscribers, at one time, with the cash, $1.50 each, will receive one copy free and $1.00 cash, or 10 new names, with the cash, one copy free and $2.50.

Our readers will oblige by informing their friends of the above very liberal inducements to subscribe for the True Witness; also by sending the name of a reliable person who will act as agent in their locality for the publishers, and sample copies will be sent on application.

We want active intelligent agents throughout Canada and the Northern and Western States of the Union, who can, by serving our interests, serve their own as well and add materially to their income without interfering with their legitimate business.

The True Witness will be mailed to clergyman, school teachers and postmasters at $1.00 per annum in advance.

Parties getting up clubs are not obliged to confine themselves to any particular locality, but can work up their quota from different towns or districts; nor is it necessary to send all the names at once. They will fulfil all the conditions by forwarding the names and amounts until the club is completed.

We have observed that our paper is, if possible, more popular with the ladies than with the other sex; and we appeal to the ladies, therefore, to use the gentle but irresistible pressure of which they are mistresses in our behalf on their husbands, fathers, brothers and sons, though for the matter of that we will take subscriptions from themselves and their sisters and cousins as well. Bate for clubs of five or more, $1.00 per annum in advance.

Parties subscribing for the True Witness between this date and the 31st December, 1881, will receive the paper for the balance of the year free. We hope that our friends or agents throughout the Dominion will make an extra effort to push our circulation. Parties requiring sample copies or further information please apply to the office of The True Witness Printing and Publishing Company, 761 Craig Street, Montreal, Canada.

In conclusion, we thank those of our friends who have responded so promptly and so cheerfully to our call for amounts due, and request those of them who have not, to follow their example at once.

ENGLISH SOCIETY OF THE PERIOD

When Onida wrote her novel of "Moths," she held up a mirror in which so many of the upper ten thousand caught a glimpse of their own faces, that a general outcry sounded throughout society. What was happening? What unscrupulous hand was rudely destroying the false art of cant and hypocrisy? Such things were unheard of, not to be mentioned; such unnatural characters were not to be portrayed; the minds of pure Englishmen and women were not to be polluted by suggestions of incidents having no counterpart in real life.

Perhaps the indignation was a trifle overdone; perhaps those who railed the loudest were only those who had quite lately left off blushing. Anyhow, it was not uncommon to hear it said: "Have you read 'Moths'?" "Oh, no, no!" "Of course not—no one could, no one does." "Do you think Onida meant Lord M— and Mrs. H—?" "I think so—very like—quite the thing." "I knew whom she meant all through. Shocking, dreadful woman; would not have the book in my house," and so on. And, unless one booked oneself a month beforehand, libraries, and more copies were sold than even of "Nana," the most popular of French novels in England. Disraeli, it is said, paled with envy because, although the first volume of "Endymion" was in every hand, the second and third were never out.

"Moths" taboos, "Moths" censured, "Moths" sacrificed by the Saturday Review, "Moths" read and renounced, is now going to be dramatized. As the legitimate property of its author, it was unfit for publication; as the plunder of the adapter, it will leave the crude glare of the footlights, and all London will flock to see what all London anatomized as untrue and immoral.

One more chapter might be added to the book, one more scene to the play. Onida might triumph and repeat what she quietly affirmed in answer to the bitter denunciations showered on her: "Such things are I paint from life, and I have not said all I could."

In one of the midland counties is the seat of a proud and ancient family. Their boast is one which has been often made, but not always proven—that all their men are brave and all their women fair. The reigning lord leads a quiet, dignified, honorable life; and if he secretly grieves that his counties will never give an heir to his house, he surrounds, her with as much respect and courtesy as if this was not the bitter disappointment of his existence. His mother, a widow before the earldom had descended to her, is one of the proud, grand women, born for the purple, and who lend to their rank more dignity than they borrow from it. She is known far and wide for her charity, her piety, her numerous deeds of benevolence. Churches and schools, poor-houses and model cottages, testify all over her estate to the noble use she has made of her fortune and influence. Sister of one daughter of the other, born in the midst of those high and elevating examples, she grew up as fair, so beautiful, that her fame was spread abroad while she was still in the school room at her country seat.

When she came out she took London by storm. Her debut in the world of fashion was a triumph. Lady G—, astonished society by her ailment, her self-possession, her cool contempt, and the audacity of her manner. She never glanced at "detrimentals"—that is to say, the ineligible;—and promptly made her choice. Her first season as a girl was her last, but of her admirers she selected one. At 19 she married a man of 23, notorious for his vices.

He drank to excess, he gambled, he led a life so wild and so dissolute, that even his title and his wealth, the impervious armor which English society hardly ever pierces, could not prevent a thrill of horror at such a match. Lady G— was warned, threatened, implored. Mindless of her youth and innocence, it was thought wisest to bare before her the shameful antecedents of her future husband. She was deaf alike to entreaties and recriminations, bent on having her own will, and answering all opposition with the calm reply: "I will make him or mar him."

Dispar of love, a wild dream of regeneration, an impossible hope of reclaiming the young man bear any part in her cold determination? It is hard to say, harder still to believe that a deeper and more questionable motive lurked in that girlish bosom. Whatever Lady G— may have thought or wished, a few brief weeks of marriage forever dispelled the illusions she might have entertained. The husband pursued his reckless road to ruin, drinking harder, gambling more furiously, equanimity an inheritance on the turf, and wasting health, honor and the last shreds of his reputation in profligate pursuits. The wife, her mother's darling, her brother's pride, the daughter of a race of earls, became, in less time than would seem credible, the dearest of all the London belles, the most photographed of the fashionable beauties; the most talked of among the many women whose names are in every mouth. Down in her own county, among the tenants who used to wonder at her young loveliness, who watched her success with loving eyes, she ceased to be mentioned at all. Her name would have been preferred to know her dead and laid in her ancestral vault rather than acknowledging such a matrimonial glitter on the old family hearth.

A little child was born, but brought "misadventure" with it. The gentle radiance which since the manger of Bethlehem seems to surround every cradle in which a first-born is laid, had no chastening influence on those two; and both parents rushed on in their headlong career, never together, each in a separate way, each contemptuous of the other, both preoccupied by that impurity which they owed to their elevated position.

A few days ago, in the suburban home of an actress belonging to the minor theatres, that peer of the realm, that earl, that noble and that noble died, at the age of 20. For a few days, lying in state, some friends, more than his reputation than he had ever been, had him removed to his own mansion, so that he should breathe his last, under his own roof.

Where was the wife? Roaming in Italy with companions of her choice, sipping at little her husband in death as in life, and refusing to return till she could be assured that her child's father would never recover.

Where is she now? She came to London to see her lawyers, to claim her rights and her jointure, disdaining to give the semblance of a regard to the tribute of a tear for the man whose name she bore, whose blood she certainly did not care for, and whose perhaps she had married to his doom. The necessary formalities concluded, she went to Paris (in London she would have been expected, countless as she was, to wait her regards in decent retirement) to enjoy the freedom of her widowhood. Freedom, which, to other justices, she had long ago freely mortgaged.

And, in the end, of all this, what was the community where it is de rigueur to appear so infinitely better than we are. The aristocracy can do no wrong; the middle classes can do no better than imitate the aristocracy; and so in all our... Our virtuous eyes, we hold up our... We talk very loud of our duties, our "good form." We make very stringent laws for others, and break them very constantly ourselves. We have a fourth cardinal virtue, sobriety, and under cover of the same, we shut our eyes to our own delinquencies, and with ostrich-like complacency, trust that no one else sees them.

So our parsons hunt; our ladies—heaven save the mark—are called P. F., which does not mean prize-fighters; our court beauties go on the stage when they leave their husbands, and their husbands return to them when the actress makes more money than the wife. Our princes on Saturday preside at meetings for the Sabbath closing of gardens and picture galleries, and on Sunday give great dinners to the dramatic profession; our divorce courts have their calendars crowded, and we go on repeating, till we firmly believe it, that English society is a model society, and that out of its pale there is no salvation. Holloway's Pills.—Sleeplessness, flatulency, acidity, nausea, and all dyspeptic indications may be speedily relieved by these famous Pills, of which large quantities are shipped to all parts of the world. The constantly increasing demands for Holloway's medicine prove its power over disease and its estimation by the public. In weakness of the stomach, in diseases of the liver, and in disorders of the system caused by cold or a sluggish circulation, no medicine is so efficacious, no remedy so rapid, as these Pills, which are altogether incapable of doing mischief. By quickening digestion, they give refreshing sleep, sharpen the appetite, impart tone to the digestive organs, purify and enrich the blood, regulate the secretions, and strengthen the whole physical frame.

For Weakness and General Debility.

FROM THE REV. FRANK OF NORTH SEARSMOON, ME. "It gives me very great pleasure to inform you of the benefit received from the use of PARVIAN SYRUP in my own family. My wife, for the past ten years, has been in feeble health—very much debilitated generally. Last spring she concluded to try a bottle of PARVIAN SYRUP, and was so well pleased with the result that she continued its use until three or four bottles had been used, and she is now in better health than at any time for ten years, and has increased in weight from 110 pounds to 126. I have employed physicians, and used a great variety of patent medicines, to the extent of hundreds of dollars, and I know she received more benefit from the PARVIAN SYRUP than all the rest together. My sales for the Syrup are very large and constantly increasing, and I do not hesitate to recommend and even warrant it to give satisfaction."

CANADA'S CANAL EXPENDITURE.

BRNALO, March 27.—The News, speaking of the free canal resolutions to-day, says: "The time was when commerce naturally, as it were, flowed to New York, but such is not the case to-day, for on one side we have Canada as a competitor, and on the other we find Baltimore, Philadelphia and New Orleans bidding for business. Our neighbors across the border who unwillingly took upon their shoulders a debt of quite $3,000,000 to construct a new canal from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario, are not idle and disheartened simply because they have received no return from their immense outlay, but rather are quite active and sanguine of conquering success. In the House of Commons at Ottawa last Friday night a resolution was adopted providing for the issuance of bonds in the sum of $250,000 for deepening and dredging the channel between Montreal and Quebec to 25 feet. If anything were needed to satisfy the people of New York State that Canada is determined, if possible, to wrest commerce from this country this contemplated expenditure of a quarter of a million of dollars ought to supply it."

STEAMBOAT DISASTER ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

MEMPHIS, March 30.—The "Golden City," when approaching the wharf at Memphis, was discovered on fire by the second engineer, who notified the pilot. The boat's bow was at once headed for the shore, and in four minutes she touched the wharf where the coal chutes were. A line was made fast to a coal barge, but the current being swift, it soon parted. The steamer floated down the river a mass of flames, with many of her passengers and crew aboard. The steamer left New Orleans on Saturday en route to Cincinnati. She carried a crew of about sixty and had forty cabin passengers, fifteen of whom were ladies and nine children. The cargo consisted of 300 tons, among which was a lot of jute, in which it is said the fire originated. Among those known to be lost are Dr. Monahan and wife, Jackson, Ohio; Mrs. Cray and Miss Lou's Crara, Cincinnati; W. H. Stowe, wife and two children, Oilis Wood and wife, Henderson, Ky; Mrs. Anna Smith, Massachusetts; Miss Campbell, Mrs. Helen Percival, Mrs. L. E. Kouns and three children. The books of the steamer were lost, so it is impossible to gather a complete list of the lost and saved. All the officers escaped except the 2nd engineer, Robt. Kelly, who first discovered the fire and remained at his post until cut off by the flames. Stowe's circus was taken aboard at Vidalia, and cages of animals and birds, with the ticket and band wagon, tents and horses, are lost. The officers when the alarm was sounded rushed through the cabin, bursting in the state room doors and saving the passengers. Within five minutes after the discovering of the fire, which broke out amidship, the aft part of the steamer was all ablaze. The people saved had to tie in their night clothes. When the steamer touched the wharf the fire communicated to the coal chest and the tug "Orion," which was also burned. As near as can be ascertained there were 25 ladies aboard the steamer, and only two were saved as far as known.

THE NORFOLK (VA.) VIRGINIA OF JAN. 10, 1881, refers to the remarkable cure effected by St. Jacobs Oil in the case of Prof. Cromwell, a known country over for his magnificent Art Illustrations—who had suffered excruciating torments from rheumatism until he tried the Oil, whose effects were magical.

Madam," remarked a testy old gentleman to a lady who rustled past him in a prodigious mass of silk dress, "madam, you make a great deal of bustle in this world."

Mr. W. A. Wing, Westport, writes:—"I wish to inform you of the wonderful results which followed the use of Northrop & Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. A cough of six months standing had reduced me to such an extent that I was unable to work. I tried many remedies without effect; at last I used the Emulsion, and before three bottles were used, I am glad to say, I was restored to perfect health."

Referring to Queen Victoria's recent visit to Beaumont College, the London Tablet (Roman Catholic) says: "The visit is one which will long be remembered at Beaumont, and cherished with grateful affection by Beaumont boys. The great kindness of Her Majesty in thus honoring a Catholic college and accepting the heartfelt expression of their loyalty and love will encourage the Catholic subjects of the Queen in fidelity to the Crown and personal attachment to her."

Among the things in Boston which excited the wonder of the Zani Indian chiefs, who are visiting that city, was a negro minstrel show. The clod dancing by a row of spangled fellows gave special delight. "This night," said one in his own tongue, "we have seen that which passes all other things in wonder. We thought our own dancers were the most perfect for keeping time and for regularity of movement, but we find that this goes over anything we have either seen or imagined, and we are covered with shame. My eyes are put out with wonder."
