

land, to work on the same lot at the same time. The only way to solve this question is to create colonization reserves and then to close the rest of the Province to colonization and only open it when the necessities of colonization exact it, and when the reserves will be fully settled.

The first thing to do after the reserves are decided upon will be to notify the limit holder that a reserve has been created in his limit, and, that, within a certain time, the rights of the Limit Holder on the reserve will cease. The Limit Holder should be given at least one year to take his wood off the lots which will be created into a reserve.

This is the Limit Holder's right. According to our present law the Limit Holder has a right to the wood above certain sizes on his limit, and while I would like to see the settler have all the wood that is on the lot that he may choose for farming, still we must respect the rights of the Limit Holder for which he has paid.

To-day when a settler takes up a lot of land, he is obliged to commence clearing a few acres the first year, and if he commences
