

THISTLE-DOWN

The idle paddle you so lately held,
The empty bow your pliant wrist propelled

Some thistles purpling into violet,
Their blossoms with a thousand thorns
afret,

And like a cobweb, shadowy and gray,
Far floats their down — far drifts my dream away.