COST $1,500,000 BEFORE A VOLUME WAS PRINTED

Advent of New Britannica Encyclopaedia Outstanding Event in the World of Letters.

The announcement of the publication of a new and the eleventh edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, marks an event in the world of letters worth more than a passing notice. It is twenty-eight years since there has been an entirely new edition of the Encyclopaedia. The so-called tenth edition, published by The Times some nine years ago, consisted in reality of a supplement to the ninth edition, which was begun in 1875 and completed in 1888. The first edition dates back to 1768, and consisted of only three volumes, but so important was the service rendered by it and so successful its editions, and so well was the work done, that it is doubtful if there is any other publication in the world which enjoys so high a reputation. In this connection it is interesting to note that of the more notable encyclopaedias published in various countries since the first issue of the Britannica some never attained to a second edition, and only one can claim a continued existence of more than fifty years.

The eleventh edition is a completely new work, founded upon a fresh survey of the world in every department of knowledge. Edward Gibbon, author of what time has declared to be the greatest historical work the world has seen, in his autobiography naively observed: "My name may hereafter be placed amongst the thousand articles of a Biographia Britannica." Gibbon, with his estimate of a thousand articles, would be astonished at the proportion of the present work. Instead of a thousand articles there are forty thousand, occupying 27,000 pages of text and requiring the use of 10,000,000 words. This production represents the labors of 1500 specialists and cost $1,500,000 before a single volume was printed. It has occupied for eight years a permanent editorial staff of sixty-four members. Illustrations include 450 full-page plates, 417 maps and 7000 illustrations in the text. The index volume contains 500,000 references.

Toronto Professors in It.

There are a number of points in connection with the new production worthy of mention. First, the publishers of this edition are the University of Cambridge, a publishing house which seems likely to be permanent. Some of the foremost publishers in Britain, including the Blackie, Constable and Bell, have had their names associated with previous editions. Also the Cambridge University Press is now the publisher, other universities, including the University of Toronto, are liberally drawn upon for contributions and information.

Another new point is that the whole edition of twenty-eight volumes has been published simultaneously. Previous editions have been put out volume by volume, the issue sometimes extending over fourteen years. One is reminded, too, of the galloping pace at which the world is moving. At the time of the publication of the last new edition, telegraphy was as yet the only province in which the usefulness of electricity had been practically established. Of Africa scarcely any knowledge existed save in respect of Cape Colony, Natal, Egypt and Algeria; the Samsa revolution represented the morbid state of the German navy; consisting of "frigates, 3 corvettes, 7 floating batteries."

A Revolutionary Feature.

Another new, almost revolutionary feature of the present edition is furnished by the use, optional with subscribers, of having the edition printed on India paper. In this way the bulk and weight of the volumes are reduced to one-third of their previous size. In previous editions the size of the volumes has been recognized as a serious drawback—quarto volumes weighing close upon seven pounds and measuring 2 1/2 inches thick. On India paper each volume of the new edition, although it contains 25 per cent. more matter, measures less than one inch in thickness. Formerly two hands were needed to lift a volume of the Encyclopaedia from the shelves; in the new edition a volume may easily be held in one hand and read with all the comfort of an ordinary sized book.

In connection with the introduction of India paper it is related that in 1841 a graduate of Oxford, returning from the far east, presented to the Clarendon Press a small quantity of paper of unusual thinness, capacity and toughness. That paper was used for the printing of 24 copies of the smallest Bible then known. Subsequent attempts to trace the source of the paper were fruitless, but in 1874 experiments led to the invention of India paper as now known. The high standing of the contributors of the Encyclopaedia Britannica need not be stated. They represent not only the best men in every department of learning, Canadians will be interested to note that among the contributors who deal with Canada and its history are Dr. Mackenzie, Prof. A. P. Coleman, Prof. W. L. Grant, Mr. E. H. Godfrey, Prof. G. M. Wrong and Prof. C. W. Colby.

Previous editions with the number of volumes and the mean date of publication are as follows:
 First edition, 8 volumes, 1770.
 Second edition, 10 volumes, 1793.
 Third edition, 18 volumes, 1805.
 Supplement, 2 volumes.
 Fourth edition, 30 volumes, 1805.
 Fifth edition, 30 volumes, 1815.
 Supplement, 6 volumes.
 Sixth edition, 20 volumes, 1824.
 Seventh edition, 21 volumes, 1835.
 Eighth edition, 22 volumes, 1847.
 Supplement, 11 volumes.
 Ninth edition, 29 volumes, December, 1910.

Troubles of Editors.

The commercial history of the Encyclopaedia is not without its vicissitudes. The first edition was published in Edinburgh by Colin Macfarquhar, with whom was associated Andrew Bell, then the principal engraver in Edinburgh. Macfarquhar died during the preparation of the third edition, "worn out by fatigue and anxiety of mind," whereupon Bell became the sole proprietor. In the interval the seller of the third edition failed. Bell died in 1809, when followed years of mismanagement, until the copyright was purchased by Scott's publisher (Constable), under whose management the books gained enormously in reputation. Scott himself laid aside the composition of "Waverley" to contribute to the supplement of the fifth edition, and the support of many other distinguished men was enlisted. Constable's house stopped payment in 1823. Thereupon, the copyright was purchased by Adam Black, and his firm, publishing successfully the seventh, eighth and ninth editions (1830-55) saw the work achieve its supreme reputation.

HOW A YOUNG WESTERN CITY MOVES AHEAD

Surprising Activities of Calgary, the Flourishing Metropolis of Sunny Southern Alberta.

CALGARY, April 19.—(Special).—As illustrating the business life of this city of 60,000—its ever-increasing activities—the spirit and vim of the constant "movement" in every feature of its rapid, substantial growth—there are incidents of one sort and another daily cropping up.

For example, the census shows that 2000 passed over 12th-street east in a few minutes, which leads an old-timer to remember that a very few years ago, not more than 2000 would pass over that road in a few months, and that about 1899 of them would be fat stock.

The number of horse-drawn vehicles scurrying autos in commission in Calgary has become so large that a new police regulation was to-day put in force, under which an officer is stationed at the junction of Eighth-ave. and First-street west, and also at Second-street east, to direct traffic and prevent congestion and disorders! This 4000 inhabitants! "Puts me in mind of King and Yonge at the 5 to 6 p.m. hour," remarked a Toronto visitor, just arrived, as he took stock of the densely thronged thoroughfare.

The shortage of houses to rent is one of the noticeable features of the situation just now. Much building is going on, but the houses are occupied as soon as built. There seems to be no possibility of setting ahead of the demand.

Between 2000 and 3000 workmen are employed building extensions of public utilities to the suburbs of Calgary. Public improvements of this character cost the city $1,750,000 in 1910. This year such expenditure will total $2,000,000. Included in it is extension of the street railway and water mains north to Tuxedo Park, one of the most popular and promising of Calgary residential sections, and which is planned with fine boulevards, driveways and recreation grounds and gardens.

Last year Calgary Public Hospital cared for 2200 patients, at a cost of $51,320. The hospital death rate was low, about five per cent.

The new store of the Hudson Bay Co., for which the site in Calgary cost $250,000, will be the largest store of the largest trading company in the world ten stories, 40 cost $1,500,000.

Preparations are on for the erection of one of the finest horse show and stock pavilions in Canada, for which $45,000 has just been voted. It will be built after the most approved model, and will have accommodation for 3000 of an attendance. The annual Calgary Exhibition is one of the best held anywhere in America.

Four sites for new schools have just been selected. Half a million dollars have been appropriated for increased school accommodation in Calgary. Seventy-three public school classes show an enrolment of over 2000. There are departments of music, manual training, drawing, drill, physical culture and household science. Calgary High School has seven teachers and 900 pupils. The city has two flourishing separate schools. And this saying more about Calgary institutions of higher learning—the provincial normal school, Western Canada College, Calgary Methodist College and St. Hilary's College for girls.

And so it goes—growth, pronounced, solid, permanent, in every direction, commercial, financial, industrial, educational, right straight along, until people have come to regard the prospect of 100,000 population for Calgary within a couple of years as not preposterous, but actually assured.

FATAL RAZOR OWNED BY RUSSELLO'S ROOM-MATE

Man Accused of Veci's Murder Had Access to Trunk—Remanded on Murder Charge.

Frank Russello, 40 Agnes-street, was charged in police court yesterday morning with the murder of Giacchino Veci at that address, in the Italian alley of Good Friday night. Donato Pansino was charged with wounding Andy Mele, who was almost scalped with a large butcher knife. Both pleaded not guilty thru their counsel, T. C. Robbette, K.C., and were remanded a week. The six Italians arrested in the case were brought to headquarters from the jail and Vincenzo Accioli, who roomed with Russello at the Agnes-street house, identified the razor found in the yard Sunday as his. He said that it had been in his trunk and belonged in the case found there Saturday morning by Detective McKinney. He said that he had left the trunk unlocked when he went for his revolver at the time of the row. It closes with a spring lock and was found locked by Detective McKinney the following morning.

When asked by Inspector Duncan if he had been to the trunk, Russello said, "Didn't you find it locked?" Russello denied any knowledge of the razor when it was shown to him. He did not even want to look at it and was generally disinclined to talk. The police now think that Russello cut his own hand when he slashed the dead man, Veci. In support of this is the statement of the doctor who dressed the wound at the hospital immediately after the fight, who says that the wound was inflicted by some very sharp instrument, more probably a razor than the only knife in evidence, which is the one which Russello says he was trying to wrest from Pansino when his hand was cut.

The belief of the police is that, as Amnell says, Russello was behind Veci when he was struck, and as the course of the wound was forward, Russello reached around Veci's neck, grabbed him by the throat with his left hand, indicated the wound with a forward stroke of the right and cut his own hand, which was holding the throat. He says, and the fact appears, that he left the fight at the time his hand was cut, and he was found a few moments later with Vincenzo Accioli, brandishing his hand close to the place where the razor was found and where Accioli had hidden his revolver.

Many Would-Be Inspectors.

The office of the medical health officer was filled with applicants yesterday morning for vacancies on the force of inspectors who are to supervise the city's first annual spring house-cleaning. They were of all ages, and most found employment, as there is a scarcity of help of this class owing to the good times which prevail.
